M. H. Gulesian, Rich Boston Man, Doomed by Armenian Terrorists

GULESIAN ASKS POLICE GUARD AGAINST ASSASINS

Rich Boston Merchant Got Death Threat From Band of Armenian Terrorists That Caused Murder of Man in New York.

Fearing for his life because of the death threat that was sent him through the mails by the Armenian terrorists of New York, M. H. Gulesian, a wealthy merchant of this city, to-day asked the police for protection.

Mr. Gulesian held a conference with other prominent Armenians of Boston as to what furrther action they should take to escape the band of assassins who were responsible for the murder of the rich rug manufacturer of New York.

The postoffice authorities, it was announced, would be asked to trace the postal card that came to Mr. Gulesian upon which was written the statement that he would be killed next Monday.

Wife Fears for Husband's Safety.

Mr. Gulesian for the first time to-day began to fully realize the danger that he is in. His wife, however, has worried about him for some time and last night she was unable to sleep. She was in tears to-day when a reporter of the BOSTON AMERICAN called at No. 85 Commonwealth avenue, Chestnut Hill.

Several other Boston men who are prominent and wealthy have received similar letters, telling them that they have been marked for death unless they make contributions to the so-called "Black Hand" organization.

Singularly enough, Miss Trixie Jennery, a Boston actress, witnessed the murder in New York and was largely responsible for the capture of the assassin. Miss Jennery was crossing Union square when Hovhannes Tavshanjian was shot down. She knelt by the side of the dying man, and he breathed his last with his head in her lap. The pretty actress pointed out the man who fired the shots, and he was arrested.

On the murder list of the terrorists in Boston, besides Mr. Gulesian, is also D. M. Arshag, an editor and publisher. Others who have feared to make known the facts have also received death threats.

Chief Watts to-day directed the police of the Dedham street station to make a careful investigation of the threatening letters that have been sent to Boston. He said that many of these letters had been received, but that he did not look upon them very seriously until the New York merchant was killed.

POST CARD THREAT.

The threat of Mr. Gulesian came in the form of a post card from some member of a group of conspirators who are working under the aegis of the Huntchagist Revolutionary Society, and doubtless emanated from the same body of terrorists, who, having killed Tavshanjian for refusing to comply with their demands, are now endeavoring to extort revolutionary contributions from such New York firms as Costigan Brothers, H. Dadurian, Bedros Kazangian, and C. Karagenslan.

When M. Gulesian reached his office at No. 15 Waltham street yesterday a post card written in English was put into his hands. It came from New York city, was dated "July 22, 12 P. M.," and bore the address "Mr Moses H. Guleshian, 12 Waltham street, Boston, Mass." On the message side of the communication, written in an unsteady, probably disguised hand, were the following words:

"My Brother—We to-day have killed H. S. Tavshanjian, and next Monday we will kill you. You are a millionaire, and you give nothing to our party. Believe me, you die!

"COMMITTEE OF REVOLUTION."

Speaking of the threat of assassination hanging over him, Mr. Gulesian said to-day:

"In the interest of law and order, as well as in the interest of the Armenian people everywhere, who are inexpressibly injured by such things, I will do my utmost to bring the perpetrators of these outrages to justice. It is infamous that in such a country as the United States—the freest and grandest country in the world, where immigrants have so many opportunities—these acts should be possible.

"I believe in a righteous revolution which has any prospect of success, and in spirit I am an ardent revolutionist as against Turkey. But when I realize the calibre of the men engaged in these proceedings, when I realize the hopelessness of any attempt under present conditions of overturning Turkish rule, especially when I see that the reprisals after each attempt fall, not upon the revolutionists who fire a few guns across the border and then take to their heels, but upon the defenceless men, women and children upon whom the Turks and the Kurds wreak their vengeance, I refuse to have anything to do with revolution, and would far rather give money to support the orphans left by these massacres, or to educate young Armenians so that they may become a credit to our race everywhere.

"Instead of lifting our people, many of whom are in an abject and starving condition at home, this revolutionary business degrades them, retards their development, and helps to discredit them in the eyes of the world.

VICTIM HIS FRIEND.

"As to Mr. Tavshanjian," added the speaker, "he was a personal friend of mine, and one of the finest men our race has produced. Three years ago he offered $25,000 toward the building of a national Armenian church in New York. His loss will be deplored by every intelligent and right-thinking man of every nationality, and there isn't an intelligent Armenian anywhere who does not today condemn the outrage of his assassination."

PLOTTERS SOUGHT IN BIG CONSPIRACY

NEW YORK, July 24.—Ten rich Armenians, besides Hovhannes Tavshanjian, who was slain by an agent of a secret revolutionist band, after a plot was hatched in Boston, were on the Armenian assassin's list, it was discovered to-day, all marked for a similar fate unless they disgorged $10,000 each. The murder of Tavshanjian by Bedros Hampartzoomian, the revolutionists' emissary, the District Attorney has learned, was not only a warning to the other ten, but also a penalty for Tavshanjian's refusal himself to pay $200,000 to the blackmailing band. Tavshanjian, the District Attorney also learned, recently called a meeting of the wealthy Armenians marked for blackmail or death and advised them strongly to resist absolutely all the demands of the "Huntchak," as the revolutionists band is known. That, it is now believed, is the immediate cause of Tavshanjian's assassination.

Repeated efforts were made by the police to induce the slayer of Tavshanjian to name the men at the head of the secret revolutionist society which ordered the assassination.

POLICE NET IN BOSTON.

Although the prisoner insisted that he alone was responsible for the crime, it is known that the police expect to arrest a prominent Armenian. The arrest may be delayed until the police here can co-operate with the authorities of Boston, Chicago and Providence in trying to capture all the leaders of the band.

Five of the ten wealthy Armenians have given information to Assistant District Attorneys Manley and Smyth regarding the blackmailing letters sent them by the organization. Samples of the blackmailing letters have been turned over to the authorities. These are marked by a roughly drawn figure in chains, with a dagger stuck through her wrists.

LEADER KNOWN HERE.

The Armenians declare that one of the leaders of the blackmailers in this country is living in Providence, but that his wealth is nothing compared with that of the real leader of the blackmailing and murder scheme, who is said to travel about, spending much of his time in Boston, and has no settled residence in this country. According to Armenians who have been made victims of the blackmailing schemes, these leaders act through various agents such as Hampartzoomian.

These agents are picked from Armenians who have suffered greatly at the hands of the Turks. The prisoner here declares that his mother and sister were killed by the Turks.

AGENT OF BLACKMAIL.

The agent is shown a man and told that he is a traitor to the Armenian cause, and a spy of the Turks. The agent kills the man pointed out, believing he is doing a good deed and not realizing that he is simply a terrorist agent used by the blackmailers to force the wealthy Armenians in this country to give up money under fear of assassination.

TELEPHONE TRUST HAS 300 DIFFERENT RATES

AUDITOR LONGLEY SO CONFESSES AT HIGHWAY COMMISSION HEARING.

Auditor Longley of the New England Telephone and Telegraph Company confessed that the 'Phone Trust had 300 different rates. He testified before the Highway Commission to-day. Here is what he said:

"Solicitors of the company are supplied with three hundred different rates. The company does not know whether it is making or losing money on certain classes of services, and so complicated are the different classes of business that any figures obtained are apt to be deceptive. In commuting rates in the cities, population and area are the first things to be considered.

Many Classifications.

"There are seven classifications in Massachusetts. Rates are higher in centres of population than in rural districts, because of larger service and larger capital.

"The rental paid the American company amounts to 4½ per cent. of the gross receipts, or $2.17 per subscriber per year.

"The notes held by Kidder, Peabody & Co. are scattered throughout New England, I am told. The company pays 5¼ per cent. for notes longer than one year and 5 per cent. on notes less than one year.

"I think these were the best rates that were obtainable at that time."

"Were investments in opening up new territory profitable?" asked Mr. Whitman.

Here followed al ively tilt between the two opposing counsel, Mr. Whitman claiming that any answer to this question should apply to specific places.

Didn't Know of Reduction.

It was finally admitted that new exchanges in certain towns did not pay at first.

On cross-examinatios by Attorney Whitman, Mr. Longley admitted that he did not know when the rate of $180 a year was reduced to $162, and that he did not know whether thatr ate is paying a profit or not.

He thought the reason for the reduction of the rate was because the cabinet went out of favor and the desk telephone became popular.

AID REFUSED DROWNING COLUMBIA PASSENGERS

—THIRD OFFICER HAWSE.

By Boston American Leased Wire.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 24.—After the tales of heroism surrounding the Columbia wreck—the glorious death of Captain Doran and the self-abnegation of the girl Maybelle Watson—comes the other side of the disaster.

A charge of gross inhumanity and the sacrifice of many lives has formally been made against Captain Hansen of the San Pedro by Third Officer Hawse of the Columbia to Local Inspector Bolles.

The accusation in so many words is that Captain Hansen caused the death of many men, women and children, struggling in the water, by refusing to take any more of the rescued on the San Pedro—a steamer that could not sink because she carried a cargo of lumber.

"Could Have Saved More."

The fearful charge is calmly made under oath by Third Mate Hawse. He solemnly says to Captain Bolles that he brought a boat load of rescued passengers up to the San Pedro and requested that they be taken care of. He declares that he was met with a refusal to receive any more of the Columbia's passengers.

"I repeatedly asked them to take the women, one of whom was half naked and delirious," says Hawse in his sworn statement.

Such an appeal would ordinarily be supposed to melt a heart of bronze, but Hawse declares that the man in command of the San Pedro refused aid.

Then comes the fearful accusation.

"If the San Pedro had taken these passengers I could have saved many more lives."

"Men Let Women Suffer."

Hawse says his boat was so full he feared to take any more in it, lest it be swamped. He saw many more men and women struggling in the water, and all he needed was his empty boat to go to their assistance.

When Hansen's steamer arrived safe in the harbor of Eureka, photographs indicated that she could have taken more men and women aboard without endangering the lives of any.

But Third Officer Hawse does not stop with his charge against Captain Hansen. He has a seadog's contempt for the men whom he rescued in his boat, and who did not show any evidence of chivalry in the hour of heroism.

One of the four women whom he had picked up was out of her head. All the women were scantily attired, but three of them were heroines and Hawse in his sworn statement says:

"I desire to speak in the highest terms of praise in regard to the three noble women and lowest terms of contempt for the men passengers who would not inconvenience themselves to make the lot of the women more bearable."

Then comes a tribute all around to Captain Peter Doran, who did everything that a man could do to save the people, and then went down with his ship to his death rather than crowd some of the passengers from a lifeboat or a raft.

In Eureka, Captain Hansen and his men are trying hard to put the blame on Captain Doran and the Columbia. In reply to the fearful charge of inhumanity preferred by Third Officer Hawse, they declare that Hawse was drunk when he rowed up to the San Pedro.

Along the water front in San Francisco the seafaring men have figured that if the first story told by the surviving officers of both the San Pedro and the Columbia is true, the San Pedro would have crushed into the port bow of the Columbia, and that it was Captain Doran who was making violent efforts to keep from running down the San Pedro.

2 ASSAILANTS IN MYSTERY AT WHITMAN

Violet James, Regaining Consciousness, Says One Was a Man.

Special to the Boston American.

WHITMAN, July 24.—Violet James, the pretty fifteen-year-old girl who was found cruelly bound and gagged in the attic of her own home after she had been missing for a whole day, has so far recovered today as to be able to tell a clearer story of her mysterious and terrible experiences. That at least two persons attacked her, and one a man, her story told to-day to the BOSTON AMERICAN reveals. She said:

"I left my home on Sunday afternoon and took a car for Mayflower Grove. I spent the afternoon and part of the evening there. I left about 9:30 o'clock and took a Whitman-bound car. I got off it at Court street and walked down Court toward home.

Heard Man's Voice.

"I don't know whether there was any one behind me or not. I didn't hear any footsteps. I reached the corner of Court street and Whitman avenue, when something was tied tightly over my mouth, and then I heard some one say:

"'Will you tie her hands?'

"This was spoken by a man. I am positive of that. That's all I remember. I don't know what happened to me from then until yesterday when I became conscious again."

This clearer account of the girl's terrible experience has given those making an investigation other things to consider. It is evident that Violet was assailed by at least two persons, one a man.

Her father declares that the mystery must be solved, he doesn't care at what trouble and expense.

Confirm Many Details.

The girl's story has been confirmed in many ways. She had been cruelly bound and the ropes had cut into her arms and hands. Violet was seen at the grove by Sylvia Benson, a daughter of Levi C. Benson, of this town. She was walking toward the lake at the time and was alone.

George Tew, Violet's uncle, also met her at the grove Sunday evening. He talked with her for a few minutes and saw her aboard the car for Whitman at 9:20 o'clock. This is the last known of the girl's movements, except what she herself tells, until she was found, groaning in pain and semi-conscious, in the third

PLAN TO-DAY FOR LODGE CONVENTION

To name a date and place for the Republican State Convention—on October 4, in Tremont Temple; to select a permanent chairman for the convention—Henry Cabot Lodge of Nahant—and a chairman and four members-at-large of the Committee on Resolutions, the executive committee of the Republican State Commitee got together at headquarters in the Kimball Building to-day to report to an afternoon meeting of the full committee. The full committee will adopt the recommendations of the executive committee, which had already adopted the recommendations of the H. C. L.

George H. Doty of Waltham, chairman of the State Committee, will be the ex-officio temporary chairman of the convention.

The executive committeemen, as they showed up to-day, tried to wear an impressive air of mystery. With the exception of the chairmanship and four members-at-large of the platform committee, what they were to do had been forecasted many days ahead. The BOSTON AMERICAN of a week ago to-day printed the authoritative statement that Lodge had picked Lodge for chairman of the convention.

TAUNTON FIRE DOES $50,000 DAMAGE

TAUNTON, July 24.—The plant of the Dighton Furnace Company, two houses and a shed belonging to the Chadwick Print Works and three carloads of machinery belonging to the latter company, with a large quantity of finished stoves and furnaces, were almost wholly destroyed by fire just after midnight. The loss is estimated at from $50,000 to $60,000.

We have killed Tavshanjian. Next Monday we will kill you. You are a millionaire and give nothing to our party. Believe me, you die!—Death threat of terrorists that this man received.

VICTORIA, B. C., BURNING DOWN

VICTORIA, B. C., July 24.—A disastrous fire is raging in this city. Fifty houses have been burned and the fire is still spreading.

The entire city is in danger. The local fire department is unable to check the progress o fthe flames. Many persons will be homeless and it is feared there may be considerable loss of life. The money loss will reach several hundred thousand dollars.

the police proved that the prisoner Hampartzoomian had given a false address in Chicago. When confronted with this fact he gave a second address, No. 41 Orchard street.

The prisoner was arraigned in the Jefferson Market Court and remanded without bail to await the action of Coroner Harburger.

Dr. O'Hanlon performed an autopsy upon the body of the murdered merchant. The inquest will be held next week.

The prisoner was taken before Inspector McCafferty, but while there he declined to make any statement whatever. While he was being arraigned an Armenian lawyer attempted to advise the prisoner, who waved the lawyer away and said he didn't know him.

Questioned by Assistant District Attorney Manley, the prisoner said that he had at one time belonged to two Armenian societies whose objects were chiefly revolutionary, but he declared that neither society had dictated the murder of Tavshanjian. When taken before the Coroner the prisoner said he was glad he had killed the merchant, and that he had come directly from Chicago to commit the crime. He was remanded to the Tombs.

WORCESTER PASTOR SCORES SLAYER OF WEALTHY ARMENIAN

WORCESTER, July 24.—Rev. Bogos Kaftanian, pastor of the Armenian-Apostolic Church of Our Savior, was called to New York last night to attend the funeral of Hoohaness Tavshanjian, the wealthy rug importer who was murdered Tuesday by Bedros Hampartzoomanian, a confessed agent of the Hunchakist society in Chicago.

Before his departure Rev. Kaftanian declared the feelings of the Armenian-speaking colony to citizens of Worcester. Rev. Kaftanian said: "The man who killed Tavshanjian is from hell. Day after day the best Armenian blood in America is being spilled by these murderers, who disguise their intentions in the cloak of patriotism.

"I can say to you honestly that I believe Tavshanjian to have been the greatest, most charitable and prosperous Armenian in this country. See, here is a book of sermons by our leading pastors of the world that he has had printed for us. Never have we requested him for church donations, but he doubled and trebled the amount we asked. He was rich and gave as a rich man can. Always he gave not less than $100 in support of any church cause. On many occasions he has given us $1000 in single donations. Moreover, he gave to the poor, unsolicited, he assisted in the maintenance of our hospital in Constantinople and he aided us in every business venture.

"That is the kind of men they are murdering. Who can explain why they do it? Is it because he refused assistance to the revolutionary society? The theory of that society is beautiful, and it may be practical when thieves and murderers cease to dictate its affairs. Tavshanjian would have contributed heavily to it, but he knew the designs of the leaders. Let the money of that society go to Armenia or Europe for the Armenians, and all would be well. Then we would sanction its purpose. But while it remains in this country for support of a few leaders, the reputable Armenians will refuse to recognize it.

"Tavshanjian was a patriot. I have visited him often with Bishop Saradjian and knew his views. The society leaders are not sacrificing such men with honest intentions."

OVER 40,000 SEE FIRE SHOW AT WONDERLAND

Boston American Coupon Holders Throng the Great Spectacle at Revere.

The greatest crowd that ever watched the Fire and Flames at Wonderland, Revere Beach, saw the splendid spectacle last night, when over 40,000 BOSTON AMERICAN coupon holders presented themselves at the entrance to the great attraction.

That all of the people could not get in last night tells the tale better than anything else. The crowd was so great that the officials of Wonderland had to ask coupon holders to line up in front of the main entrance to the show, and then wait until the gates were opened and the audience which had seen one performance was dismissed.

House after House was filled last night by BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN coupon holders, and still the people came. Several times during the evening the line extended from the gates to the show clear back along the board walk and up onto the bridge that crosses the railroad.

Tuesday night crowd records were all broken, and still every train, street car and every other means of transportation worked overtime to carry the crowds.

The visitors made straight for the Fire and Flames, the moment they got into the enclosure. There they were massed around, until they understood that the only way they could get in was to take their places in the long line and wait for the gates to be opened.

FISHERMEN GET LOBSTERS OUT AT SEA

Theory That Crustacean Can Be Fished for Only Off Shore Revolutionized.

With the arrival at Commercial wharf today of the fishing smack, J. R. Atwood came the news that the industry of lobster fishing has been revolutionized.

The Atwood brought to Boston 2005 lobsters which had been caught off Cash's bank more than 75 miles off the Maine shore.

This load of lobsters is the first ever brought to Boston from deep sea fishing grounds.

John G. Cox, one of the best posted men in the lobster industry, said to-day:

"This inauguration of deep-sea lobster fishing means more than any one can imagine now. It means that the trade will be revolutionized, and that lobsters will now be fished for and caught out at sea instead of along shore, as has always been the custom."

Captain Lawry, of the Atwood, said that he had 100 traps, that he set them seventy-five miles from shore, pulled them eight times and caught 2,005 lobsters. He said he would have caught more had this not been the shedding season, when the lobsters are in hiding.

TOAST MAYOR AS DISPENSER OF CITY SNAPS

The health of Mayor John F. Fitzgerald was drunk in hot clam broth and the Busy One was toasted as the greatest Mayor Boston has had since Josiah Quincy, at an outing of the John F. Fitzgerald Club of Ward 9 at Nantasket Point last night. The celebration was in recognition of the adding of the name of a clubmate, James Bogan of No. 9 Union Park street, to the padded payrolls at a salary of $1,600 a year as deputy sealer of weights and measures.

The trip to the Point was made in the steamer Princess, under command of Captain Frank J. Gethro, another member of the club who enjoys a good thing from the city in the boating privilege at Marine Park. William H. Glenn, partner of the club's president, former Alderman Patrick Henry Bowen, in the contracting business, were prominent members of the party. After several schooners of clam broth had been drunk it was freely predicted that Mayor Fitzgerald would further recognize the organization by granting Contractor Glynn the moving picture privilege at Marine Park, despite the opposition of the South Boston clergy.

$2,000 FIRE IN COAL POCKET

Fire in the coal pocket at No. 212 Border street, East Boston, owned by Austin Gore & Son, early to-day, resulted in damage amounting to $2,000. The fire was discovered by a resident in the tenements across the street. At that time the fire was burning briskly. An alarm was sent in from box 634.

Fortunately the wind, though slight, blew the sparks away from the crowded tenements on the other side of the street and enabled the firemen to confine the fire to the [illegible] wharf.

MRS. WINTHROP TOSSED FROM HORSE, DIES

Mrs. Frederick Winthrop of Boston and Hamilton, one of the younger matrons of the Myopia Hunt Club set, died early today at her country home, Groton House, Hamilton, from injuries received from being thrown by an unbroken horse she was starting to ride last Thursday.

Mrs. Winthrop was Miss Dorothy Amory, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles W. Amory of this city. She was the sister of William Amory, 2d, of the Norfolk Hunt Club and of George G. Amory of the Myopia Hunt Club.

Mrs. Winthrop was considered a clever horsewoman. Last Thursday she started out on a horse she had recently purchased to follow the Myopia hounds.

As she turned from her driveway into the field the horse balked and reared, throwing Mrs. Winthrop heavily. It was thought at first she would recover. She made a gallant fight for life but succumbed to her injuries to-day.

floor of her parents' house, where she had evidently been carried by her assailants with the family on the second floor at the same time.

Denounces the Police.

Believing that her daughter was the victim of a brutal assailant, Mrs. Joseph T. James is loud in denunciation of the police for not running down the guilty ones. On the other hand, the police declare that the girl was not the victim of an attack, and have practically dropped the investigation.

"Our neighbors hint that we tied the girl ourselves," said Mrs. James bitterly. "I can only assert that neither we or the girl herself had anything to do with it. She was certainly attacked in front of the house next door—the Howlands'—carried upstairs in our house, tied and gagged. As sure as the sun rises we will find out who did this, even if the police are too lazy to investigate."

Chief of Police F. H. Smith, who is still watching the case, though disbelieving the girl's tale, as he says, feels that at present he can do nothing toward solving the problem. He admits that the young woman could not actually have tied her hands herself, but declares she had played a trick on her parents to avoid punishment.

"She did it herself," he said; "how, I don't know. She had trouble last Friday with her mother and was whipped for running away, and then when she ran away again Sunday she took this means of escaping punishment.

"No, I haven't got any officer out on this case, for there is no need of it. When she gets better I will find out all there is to know, for I will make her confess. You can't make the mother believe but that the girl was carried all the way through the street, into the cellar of the house, through an open bulkhead, up two flights of stairs, through the kitchen and up another flight of stairs into the room where she was found. That is impossible."

Violet is still under the care of Dr. W. P. Hutchinson, the family physician, who states that he finds no evidences of serious bodily injuries, and believes she will be herself again in a few days. When seen late yesterday by a reporter for the BOSTON AMERICAN she was reclining on a couch, and told the newspaper man what she could recall of her experiences, as given above.

Bound, gagged and in a semi-conscious condition, crying "Don't poison me, don't tie me, the cords hurt dreadfully," pretty Violet James, the daughter of Joseph T. James, of No. 68 Court street, was discovered by her father in her own house on Monday night, after she had been missing a day. Her aged father found the girl in the attic of their neat little home with her face toward the floor, her hands cruelly bound behind her back, caught with a heavy piece of cord. A linen handkerchief and her own silk belt made the gag that was tied over her mouth, while she was blindfolded with a wide black hair ribbon.

How Did She Enter House?

The house is situated on the West side of Court street and faces East, with the Corthell School in the rear. Leading from the school yard is a partially covered walk.

The police think that the girl may have been taken from the school house yard, gagged and bound, and through the cellar, where there is a large bulkhead which is always left open, up the rear stairs, two flights and left in the room where she was found.

It seems incredible that all this could have occurred when members of the family were seated not four feet from the stairway. The door leading to the stairway from the sitting room was shut.

What the girl was doing and where she was for twenty-four hours the time between that when she was last seen and when she was found, is another mystery.

Room Had Been Empty.

The room in which the girl was found had been vacant but a short time before her discovery, for Robert Ibbitson, an occupant of the lower part of the house, went up to one of his rooms and saw nothing out of the ordinary. The girl's elder sister, Anna, went into the room at 6:30 believing that perhaps the girl, being afraid to return to face her parents after she had taken a few cents from the family treasury, might possibly have hidden in the attic, but the girl was not there.

Violette is a pupil in the Hastings school on Alden street, where she is spoken of in the highest terms by her teachers and schoolmates.

IN warm weather bathing becomes an additional delight, and a visit to a Jaynes store would probably suggest to you many little things that would add greatly to the comfort and pleasure of your bath.

Many people, for instance, find sea salt very beneficial. With bath mits you can give yourself a brisk rubbing down. Or, perhaps, you'd appreciate a really good Turkish towel, a bath mat or a brush.

Whatever you get at Jaynes' can be depended upon for its quality, and we do such a large business in our many stores that we can afford to sell at prices that are "cost prices" to many.

AUTO DRIVERS USE CARS TO FIGHT DUEL

COLUMBUS, O., July 24.—Two drivers of automobiles fought a terrible duel here with their machines as weapons. They are Joe Medlam, of this city, and Eugene E. Reyer, of Kokomo, each an agent for his particular type of car.

An accidental collision started the row. Each man became angry and, putting on full speed, charged the other. Time and again they crashed together each trying to put the other machine out of action. They would back away then charge again, until the fenders of Medlam's machine were so bent it wouldn't run.

Medlam then became more angry than ever and leaped into the other car. He began to pummel Reyer, but the police put an end to it.

HAYWOOD'S ACCUSER FLAYED BY DARROW.

POLISHED CHICAGOAN, IN CLOSING ARGUMENT FOR DEFENCE, HOTLY ATTACKS ORCHARD.

By Boston American Leased Wire.

BOISE, Idaho, July 24.—Clarence S. Darrow, the polished Chicago lawyer, today for the defence addressed the jury in whose hands rests the fate of William D. Haywood, on trial for conspiring to murder ex-Governor Steunenberg.

Mr. Darrow's argument is calculated to arouse their minds against the assassin, Orchard; to show the glaring inconsistencies of his story. Much is expected by the defence of the Illinois attorney, noted for his rare faculty of impressing juries.

Senator Borah also speaks to-day, in argument for the prosecution, and the sharp tongued son of the Rockies may be expected to be fully as effective as Darrow. Senator Borah has long been familiar with Idaho juries, has unquestioned mastery of the details of the trial and, though master of the forensic art, is able to couch his oratory on a level with his auditors' ideas.

Before Mr. Darrow, two attorneys had addressed the jury, one aligning the evidence which in his mind tends to prove that Haywood is guilty of the murder because he incited Orchard to commit homicide, and the other emphasizing his construction of the law and interpretation of the testimony which, in his opinion, justifies a verdict of acquittal.

In the force of the two arguments made, neither James H. Hawley of the prosecution, nor Edward F. Richardson of counsel for the defence, had any decided advantage.

Orchard Is Denounced.

Denouncing Harry Orchard and his "father confessor," McPartland, vehemently asserting that the officials of Idaho are the catspaw for Colorado mine owners and politicians, attorney E. F. Richardson closed his argument late last evening. Sultry, suffocating weather had compelled a recess from noon till sundown. All day Mr. Richardson referred to Orchard as a maniac with a mania for claiming atrocities that never occurred or that never were committed. In this connection he read Orchard's own testimony wherein he said he heard of the death of John Neville, his one-time partner, and wrote Pettibone that he had put Neville out of the way. Neville had died of natural causes and this, argued Richardson, shows the quality of mind of the state's chief witness.

"Is it not significant," said Richardson, replying to sweeping charges by Prosecutor Hawley, "that every witness who corroborated Orchard on minor matters was a white-winged harbinger of truth? These same witnesses were black perjurers when they contradicted the penitentiary pet on matters that are material.

The futile attempt to assassinate Governor Peabody, Adjutant General Sherman Bell, Justices Goddard and Gabbert, and a couple of others, as related by Orchard, were declared by Richardson to have had no connection with Haywood, Moyer or Pettibone.

Assassin Uncorroborated.

"Do you suppose," thundered Mr. Richardson, "that any of these men would be alive to-day if Haywood and his associates had an inner circle whose object was to kill, kill, kill, always killing, as Orchard said? Sherman Bell walked the streets of Denver, unguarded and unprotected. Is it imaginable that Haywood would set the murderers on his trail and then let him escape? No, gentlemen of the jury, if these men had murder in their hearts, it is not probable that they ordered the death of Peabody, Bell and the others, and then revoked the death sentence.

"No living person comes here to corroborate Orchard," said Mr. Richardson. "Nothing is here but the assassin, this monster who lies to send men to the gibbet as he says he planted bombs to send others to eternity. Where is the evidence the great Pinkerton detective agency promised?

"You men of Idaho will be paying taxes for many years to pay the bills for washing a lot of Colorado's dirty linen. You men will be put to the expense of prosecuting crimes which were committed in Colorado and are punishable there. A hundred felonies in Colorado and one in Idaho.

"But that is not the affair of this defence. We do not care about that. That is the business of the people of Idaho. When this Commonwealth undertakes to hire the Pinkertons, you must pay the bills. When you undertake the solution of the mining troubles in Colorado the trouble is yours. But you must not, you cannot hang Haywood on the flimsy case that has been made here."

ELECTRICITY FOR SUBURBAN TRAINS OF HUB

That Boston suburban passenger trains are to be operated by electricity is the statement made to-day by Vice-President Timothy E. Byrnes of the New York, New Haven & Hartford railroad.

When the electrification of the suburban lines of the New Haven from New York city to New Rochelle was put into operation to-day for the first time, Vice-President Byrnes said:

"Boston will have an electric suburban service over the New Haven just as soon as the change shall become physically and mechanically possible. To that end we are abolishing grade crossings faster than required by the State authorities.

"Mechanically, we must be sure that the New York experiment is on the right line for heavy traction before extending it to other parts of the system. I may promise the transformation will occur without unreasonable delay."

KNIGHTS OF ST. ROSE ENTERTAIN AT TEA

What is considered a very pleasing feature in connection with the Old Home Week exercises among the several Catholic organizations in Boston is the afternoon tea to be given every day during the week to women visitors by the Knights of St. Rose at their headquarters, No. 15 Worcester street. A large sum of money has been appropriated by the members to defray expenses. In addition to open house there will be an entertainment provided each evening.

NO SOCIALISM IN NOVEL BY PATTERSON

CHICAGO, July 24.—Joseph Medill Patterson, society man, clubman, journalist, socialist, politician and scientific farmer, has written a novel. He expects his book to be in print by early Fall.

The novel is entitled "A Little Brother of the Rich." It deals with society and the stage. The scene is laid in New York.

"I have refrained from drawing any portraits of my society friends in its pages," he said. "My hero undertakes the difficult task of 'breaking into New York society,' and eventually succeeds.

"The novel has no deep moral or great purpose. It is meant to entertain. Though its name might suggest that it had socialistic tendencies, I have been careful to keep socialism out of the story."

YANKEE IN BERLIN CAPTURES MURDERER

BERLIN, July 24.—The quick, fearless action of Philip Burnett, son of Representative Burnett of Alabama, who yesterday captured the murderer of a young woman in a cafe on Under den Linden, may cause a great deal of inconvenience. The German authorities are strict in the matter of securing and binding all possible witnesses to homicide cases. Senator and Miss Latimer of South Carolina and Mrs. Howell of New Jersey were with Burnett at the time. The American party were walking past the cafe when the murder occurred. Burnett, without hesitation, captured the murderer before he had time to raise his revolver and held him until the police arrived.

HOW IT FEELS TO PHOTOGRAPH A LION IN HIS DEN----BY THE MAN WHO DID IT

Boston American Staff Artist Describes Thrilling Experience in Lair of Wild Animals at the Bostock Arena at Paragon Park

Talk about frenzied photography. How would you like to photograph wild animals—FROM THE INSIDE OF THE CAGE! This unusual thing has just been done by Adelbert B. Reed—one of the staff photographers of the BOSTON AMERICAN—at Bostock's Animal Arena in Paragon Park, Nantasket Beach. Here is Mr. Reed's own story of his camera work and his experiences inside the wild animal cage.

By Adelbert B. Reed.

With the cheerful assignment to go down to Paragon Park and photograph some wild animals in the Bostock Arena, from inside the cage, I sought Manager McFleld ecil of the Bostock outfit.

Mr. Cecil's answer was much to the oint:

"Inside the cage—No!"

"Why not?" I asked.

"Well," he said, "it's taking too many chances for you and for us. We don't want any more people clawed up aere than the work requires. These big cats are skittish and nervous. They are more treacherous than anything else on four legs. It's enough risk for the trainer without a stranger butting in. What's the matter with you, anyhow, tired of life?"

"Don't Get Too Near 'Em."

"It won't take but a second, once I get inside the cage," I represented.

"Yep, I know. And it won't take but another second for the animals to get busy if they see fit," replied Cecil.

But, finally, after some argument and after promising that I would not hold the Bostock Company or the Paragon Park management responsible for what happened, I persuaded Cecil to let me have a chance.

"I'll tell you," he said, "you can begin easy and work up. You can take the Teddy Bears first. They are the most docile."

Then he cautioned me about getting too near the animals, about moving about very slowly, about avoiding any sign of nervousness and, above all, about displaying my camera any more than necessary.

"The great thing with wild animals," he said, "is to get them used to the trainer and for the trainer always to be the same to them, never changing his apparel and never acting any differently. It's just like handling babies, only these babies are pretty hard specimens in a mix-up."

Tries It on Teddy Bears.

So, first I tried the Teddy Bears. Everyone is familiar with those funny, furry little fellows in the Bostock arena. Trainer Martino went into the cage with Yvette and Toby. The bears sat down in chairs, for all the world like humans. They began their ridiculous whining and growling, for these little bears are eternally kicking to themselves about one thing or another. I cautiously moved around toward Yvette and sat down next to her. I took out pencil and paper and made some notes on Yvette's growls. Then Trainer Martino brought out Fifi and Pierre, two other bears, for an automobile ride. Fifi sat at the steering wheel, a la chauffeur, while Pierre sat beside her and enjoyed the ride. The auto glided around in a big circle and I "snapped" the outfit. So far, so good.

Next for the lions. Madame Dorcy, the woman lion tamer, took one of her big cats inside the cage. With a final instruction from Cecil to "move slowly and be quick," I started to carry out this complex instruction.

Face to Face With a Lion.

I opened a rear door into the cage and stepped in as cautiously as though I were walking on egg shells. Madame Dorcy had the lion perched on a big stand. He was quiet when I came in. But the minute I came into his range of vision he "sat up and took notice" with disconcerting promptness.

He opened a mouth apparently as big as the East Boston tunnel and displayed as fine a set of teeth as I ever hope to meet. He began a hissing snarl and raised one huge fore-paw.

Madame Dorcy raised her whip threateningly.

"Tait tu done, Victor," she said.

Victor didn't "Tait tu" for a cent, but kept his mouth open and paw up, as perfect a picture of feminine rage as one could wish.

"Vite, Victor, vite!" snapped Madame Dorcy.

"Yes," thought I to myself, "vite, Victor, whatever that means."

"Lady of the Leopards."

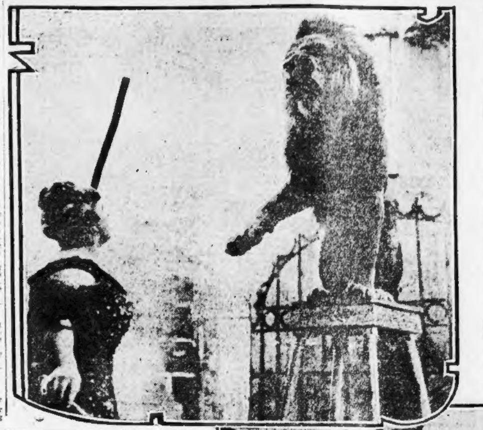
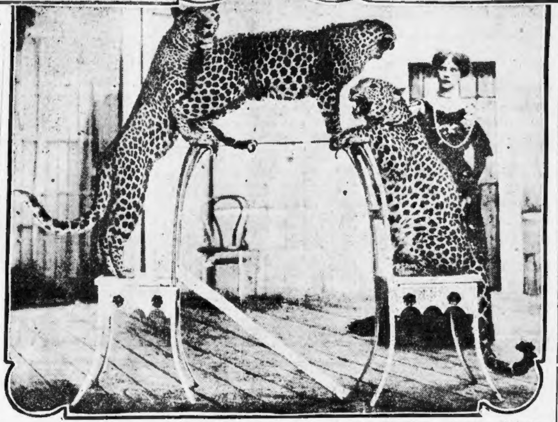
Meanwhile I was trying to focus my camera with one eye and watch Victor with the other, a rather hard job. Keeping in mind Cecil's adjuration to be as lively as I could, I finally got Victor in range and pressed the button, hoping that I would get the old rascal's pleasing expression into the picture. Then I slowly backed out of the cage and shut the door after me. About this time I drew a real breath—honest, it was my first sigh of relief.

Once learning that the trainer had pretty good control over the animals, the rest was not so hard. I took pictures of other lions, of a tiger and of Madame Ora Cecil, the Lady of the Leopards, with some of her leopards and also with a puma.

Some of the animals they would not let me take inside the cage at all, saying they could hardly trust the brutes with the trainer. But, for a first experience inside an animal cage, I was satisfied.





The Lady and the Tiger—also the Lion. They howl, they growl and fight. The Boston American photographer says he don't want Madame Dorcy's job.

CITY'S FESTAL GARB AROUSES WALKER'S IRE

Official Old Home Week Color Schemer Objects to the Decorations.

The artistic soul of Architect C. Howard Walker, the official color schemer of the Old Home Week executive committee, is vexed because his suggestions for Old Home Week decorations are not being followed out in the public and private adornment of the city. For one thing, the American flag is being used too much, instead of the official Old Home Week flag.

"The red and white stripes of the American flag," says Mr. Walker, "fuse at a distance and become pink."

Also, Mr. Walker thinks, the city will look like an exaggerated barber's pole unless the decorations are changed. As the guests of Old Home Week are not invited here simply to get shaved, Mr. Walker wants the color scheme shifted a bit.

Praises for the B. & M.

The Boston & Maine Railroad is the candy goods in the decorative line, in Mr. Walker's mind. He approves highly of the decorations which adorn the North Station. The B. & M. may be a soulless corporation and may hold part of this State and all New Hampshire in the hollow of its financial hand, but it is all to the elegant when it comes to decorations.

In connection with this decorative problem, an interesting question has arisen. Who conceived the idea of a green banneret for an Old Home Week flag? This banneret is the one with the three pyramid-like peaks on it, looking considerably like a row of emerald scallops. It is shrewdly hinted that Mayor John F. Fitzgerald evolved this design, so far as color goes at least.

Mr. Walker has issued the following ultimatum to the decorators:

"A circular sent out by the Old Home Week committee had these suggestions: Avoid long streamers and fans of bunting; all flags should be displayed on staffs; there should be a preponderance of white.

Mr. Walker Gives Reasons.

"From decorations already begun on several buildings these suggestions seem to have either been ignored or misunderstood, and the following reasons for their existence may serve as a further explanation:

"Long streamers other than bannerettes are to be avoided because they become strings and destroy the lines and scale of the architecture. Flags, banners and bannerettes should be on staffs or poles because they are neither aprons nor table covers, and have little effect unless waving or draped. In order that a street should be effective in perspective they should be out from the building or against the sky, and not used as flat rectangles on the facades.

"Flags used as fans are the most ordinary type of would-be decorations, and become unrelented semi-circular spots on a building.

"Use Chiefly White Color."

"White should be the predominant color because of both gayety and contrast. Blue should be next in quantity.

"In addition to this the constant use of the national flag goes far to make American decorations ineffective. The red and white stripes of the national flag fuse at a distance and become pink. The flag waving deserves its name of Old Glory—used in excess in decoration it becomes ineffective.

"The Old Home Week flag, with broad field of color, was invented for the very purpose of taking the place at this time of the national flag, and providing broad masses of white color."

FEDERAL REPORT SHOWS UNION LABOR PROGRESS

BAY STATE FIGURES PROMINENTLY IN INDUSTRIAL CONFLICTS OF 25 YEARS.

A report of the highest importance to every employer and to every employe in the country was issued to-day by the Bureau of Labor of the Department of Commerce and Labor at Washington. It is devoted to a consideration of the strikes and lockouts in the United States during the twenty-five-year period, 1881-1905.

Several of the revelations are of special interest to Massachusetts. The report shows for example that this State is one of a group of five states in which during the period under consideration there occurred 63.46 per cent. of all the strikes, 69.44 per cent. of all the establishments involved in strikes, 56.22 per cent. of all lockouts and 77.99 per cent. of all establishments involved in lockouts. This showing is made although in 1900 these five states had only 45 per cent. of all the manufacturing establishments in the country.

The other States in the group are New York, Pennsylvania, Illinois and Ohio.

Success of Organized Labor.

Of interest is the declaration that employes who went on strike succeeded more often than they failed, and that the strikes that were ordered by labor organizations were much more successful than those which were not so ordered.

Employes succeeded in winning all the demands for which the strikes were undertaken in 47.94 per cent. of the establishments, succeeded partly in 15.28 per cent., and in only 36.78 per cent. of the establishments did they fail entirely to win any of their demands. On the other hand, the employers, when they took the initiative and locked out their employes, succeeded more often than they failed. Lockouts resulted wholly in favor of employers in 57.20 per cent. of the establishments involved, succeeded partly in 10.71 per cent., and failed entirely in 32.09 per cent. of the establishments.

Striks ordered by labor organizations were wholly successful in 49.48 per cent. of the establishments involved, partly successful in 15.87 per cent. and failed entirely in only 34.65 per cent. of the establishments. On the other hand, strikes not ordered by labor organizations were wholly successful in but 33.86 per cent. of the establishments involved, partly successful in 9.83 per cent. and failed entirely in 56.31 per cent. of the establishments.

Strikes and Lockouts.

The report contains interesting data as to the number of strikes and lockouts that have occurred in the twenty-five years ending 1905.

The total number of strikes in the United States during this period was 36,757, and of lockouts 1,546, or 38,303 labor disturbances of both kinds. Strikes occurred in 181,407 establishments and lockouts in 18,547 establishments, making a total of 199,954 establishments in which these interruptions of work occurred.

The total number of persons who went out on strike during the twenty-five years was 6, 728,048, and the number of persons locked out was 716,231, making a total of 7,444,279 employes striking and locked out.

Over 90 per cent. of all those thrown out of work by strikes were males and only 9.45 per cent. females. In lockouts 84.18 per cent. of the employes thrown out of work were males and 15.82 per cent. females.

The most important cause of lockouts was disputes concerning recognition of union and union rules and employers' organization, which alone and combined with other causes produced nearly one-half of all lockouts and included more than one-half of all establishments involved in lockouts.

Progress of Arbitration.

Within recent years the effort to bring about the settlement of strikes and lockouts by joint agreement of organizations representing the parties or by arbitration by a disinterested third party has been attended with considerable success. During the five-year period 1901 to 1905, 5.75 per cent. of all strikes and 12.20 per cent. of all lockouts were settled by joint agreement and 1.60 per cent. of the strikes and 2.03 per cent. of the lockouts were settled by arbitration.

These methods of settlement have been thus far largely confined to a few industries, practically one-half of the strikes and two-thirds of the lockouts settled by joint agreement being in the building trades, and about 14 per cent. in the coal and coke industry.

Of the strikes settled by arbitration more than one-fourth were in the building trades and 13 per cent. in the coal and coke industry.

HINGHAM GIRL BROUGHT HOME

BUFFALO, N. Y., July 24.—Sobbing her disbelief that Charles L. Penfield, was a married man, and hysterical with grief and rage, when the news was broken to her that the man had a wife and family in Springfield, Dorothy Nichols, the 16-year-old Hingham girl who ran away from home several days ago to join Penfield at Perry, S. D., threw herself into her grandfather's arms and indulged in wild lamentations against the fate that kept her from him.

Wild in her hysteria and uncontrollable in her anger she shrieked out:

"It is not true. I don't believe a line of it. He did have a wife, but she is dead. He told me so himself!"

After soothing the child for some time her grandfather, John W. Nichols, brought her to a rational state, and she started back to her home in Hingham.

CHURCH PARTY FISHING IN BAY

The Swedish Methodist Church of Quinsigamond village, Worcester—some fifty members of it—is afloat on the fishing steamer Philadelphia, to-day, to catch all the fish lying around loose in Massachusetts Bay.

To make sure they missed nothing several of the party cast over lines the minute the Philadelphia backed out from her Central Wharf slip.

Several of the Quinsigamonders were armed with trout poles.

The Worcester party left Quinsigamond at 6 a. m. in a bargue-rigged trolley and steered a safe course to Park square. Disembarking there they bore a quartering course to Central wharf. There they were heartily welcomed by Captain Alfred N. Sorenson of the Philadelphia, who speaks Danish, Swedish, Norwegian and various Northland dialects. The party was in charge of Captain Charles E. Mattson, who has sailed the raging waters of Lake Quinsigamond from shore to shore. The Rev. Francis O. Logren and the Rev. Axel Tjurnlund were noticeable among the fishermen. The others ran mostly to Peters, Oscars, Hanses, Carls and similar Swedish names.

COL. CUTTING PASSES AWAY

Members of exclusive Boston clubs and men prominent in political and G. A. R. circles were grieved to-day to learn of the death of Colonel Walter Cutting at Pittsfield.

Colonel Cutting, who was sixty-six years old, expired at Meadow Farm, his Summer home, of uremia and heart disease.

He served as colonel on the staff of Governor Russell and was a member of the Somerset Club in this city.

He was a cousin of R. Fulton and W. Bayard Cutting of New York. Besides his widow he leaves one son, Walter Livingston Cutting, and three daughters, Mrs. Arthur Cumnock, Mrs. Russell A. Hibbs, Miss Juliana Cutting of New York and Pittsfield.

ECZEMA NEARLY ALL HIS LIFE

Face and Neck Affected—Itching At Night Was Unbearable—Attended By Six Doctors—Used Arsenic Treatment Three Months, But

FOUND CUTICURA THE ONLY CURE

"I had suffered nearly all my life with eczema of the face and neck. It troubled me mostly at night when the itching would become unbearable and kept me awake a good part of each night. I had at least six doctors at different times attending me, but none of them could effect a permanent cure. One of them gave me arsenic and I tried that for three months, but it did little good, if any. I read a Cuticura advertisement in the paper about one year ago and decided to try the treatment. I used only two cakes of Cuticura Soap, one box of Cuticura Ointment, and one bottle of Cuticura Resolvent. It gave me great relief, but after I had stopped using it for a month the eczema came back. As the Cuticura treatment was the only thing that gave me any relief I started it again and persisted with it until I was entirely cured, which took from five to six months, and I have not been troubled since. I still use the soap as it has such good healing qualities and does not irritate the skin as the general run of soap does. I highly recommend the Cuticura Remedies to any one troubled with skin or scalp diseases of any kind. E. W. McPhail, 1511 Market St., Philadelphia, Pa., Jan. 29 and Feb. 13, 1907."

POLICE FAIL TO HUNT FOR LODGE'S MAN

Robert C. Proctor, Guilty of Grafting, Believed to Be in Washington.

FUGITIVE FROM JUSTICE

The dust accumulates on a bulky paper in one of the pigeon holes in the desk of Inspector Armstrong at Police Headquarters. It is a warrant for the arrest of Robert C. Proctor, grafter, convicted of larceny, sentenced to ten months on Deer Island, fugitive from justice.

Why isn't Proctor serving his sentence?

The police officials shrug their shoulders when you ask them, and say they don't know where to find him." They do not explain what efforts have or have not been made in that direction.

For thirteen years Robert G. Proctor was private secretary to Henry Cabot Lodge, senior representative of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts in the Senate at Washington. Proctor occupied that position of trust, honor and responsibility at the time he was indicted by the Suffolk Grand Jury, in April of last year, for the larceny of $225 from John G. Bestgen of Quincy, who wanted the consulate at Solingen, Germany, and who took Proctor's advice and contributed $225 to the Republican campaign fund in October, 1904.

Admitted Taking Money.

Proctor admitted that he took the money from Bestgen; admitted that he was called out into the corridor from the Republican State Committee rooms and received the Bestgen bundle. He testified that he gave it to "some person competent to receive it, but he couldn't remember to whom.

"I know it was not to Senator Lodge," he said. "I was there with the Senator that day, but I was away from him only a few minutes." At one time he was positive that he gave the money either to Secretary James B. Reynolds or to Thomas Talbot, the State chairman. Reynolds is now assistant secretary of the United States Treasury. Both testified before the April Grand Jury a year ago that they did not get the money from Proctor. Before the trial jury, two months later, they couldn't remember.

Where is Proctor?

Fugitive from Justice.

Hundreds of comparatively unknown persons have gone down the bay to the prison at Deer Island since Lodge's former secretary was found guilty a year ago. Scores have made the trip since Proctor, two months ago, was declared a fugitive from justice.

Proctor is believed to be in Baltimore or Washington. Why isn't he brought back like any other grafter to serve his time on the Island? Thousands of people are beginning to ask the question.

The accompanying chronological table shows that able counsel—former Attorney-General Herbert Parker, Republican leader, among them—saw to it that Proctor got the benefit of every legal aid. His case went finally to the highest tribunal of the State.

He has been found guilty, sentenced, and had his day in court.

Why isn't he serving his sentence?

Where IS Proctor?

Chronology of Case.

1906.

March—District Attorney Moran, appearing before a Legislative committee, instances the "Proctor" case as one illustrating his need of assistants.

April 3—Proctor, in Washington, hotly talks of coming on to sue Moran for libel.

April 5—Still talks of a libel suit; is going before the Grand Jury on it.

April 7—Morning, the Grand Jury indicts Proctor for larceny; evening, police inspectors are looking around the hotels for him.

April 8—Proctor gives himself up. Surveyor of the Port J. J. McCarthy and State Senator Dan W. Lane furnish $500 bail.

April 18—Proctor resigns as Senator Cabot Lodge's private secretary.

June 28—Proctor testifies that he has been secretary to Lodge for thirteen years and that he is "still acting in that capacity."

June 29—Jury finds him "Guilty."

July 2—Judge DeCourcey, in the Superior Criminal Court, sentences Proctor to be confined at hard labor in the House of Correction at Deer Island for 10 months. Sentence is suspended until July 13 pending argument by counsel. Motion for a new trial is overruled.

July 5—District Attorney Moran has members of the Republican State Committee back before the Grand Jury again.

September 21—Stated that on October 13 the Bill of Exceptions is to be heard and passed upon by Judge DeCourcey.

December 29—Bill of Exceptions is allowed by Judge DeCourcey.

1907.

March 12—Arguments before the Full Bench of the Supreme Court in Commonwealth v. Robert G. Proctor on exceptions based upon the refusal of the Superior Court justice to direct a verdict of not guilty on the ground of insufficient evidence.

May 14—Rescript received; exceptions overruled by the Supreme Court of the Commonwealth.

May 20—The case is "listed" for sentence; Proctor fails to appear; Moran gives him one week of "grace."

May 27—Proctor is called for sentence; he fails to appear and is declared defaulted. Default warrant issued and sent to Inspector Armstrong.

Since then no action for 58 days!

Has the secret of life on Mars been wrested from space?

Is the planet inhabited, and if so, are we soon to be in communication with the Martians?

Telescopic and photographic work has brought us within the past few years tantalizingly near to the data so long sought, but it remains for the results of the Lowell expedition to the Andes to give us the latest facts about our nearest planetary neighbor.

Mars was nearer to the earth on July 13 than it had been in fifteen years, and on that night thousands of telescopes were pointed to the planet and hundreds of cameras sought to catch the story that the human eye could not read.

Double Canals Seen.

On that night Professor Percival Lowell of Boston wired to Harvard University from his station at Flagstaff, Arizona: "South American Lowell expedition cables double canals seen, oases photographed."

The scientific world has eagerly awaited the receipt here of these photographs, for under the microscope they will reveal much that has never before even been dreamed of.

Professor William H. Pickering of Harvard, who has made a life-long study of Mars, has been particularly anxious to see the photographs made from the Lowell observatory in the Andes.

"It has been generally admitted by astronomers," he said to an AMERICAN reporter, "that better results could be obtained by the study of Mars through a telescope than by photography, but since Professor Lowell's claim that his photographers have caught the canals and the oases, the interesting question now is, what will these pictures really show? They ought to settle many doubts."

Some Remarkable Charts.

In the meantime the Abbe Moreux, director of the observatory at Bourges, has been making some remarkable charts of the variations in the appearance of the planet during the past Spring. By taking daily note of the appearance of the planet he has constructed a chart of the Martian globe as easily as one chould chart the earth, with this advantage, that the polar regions of Mars are plainly in sight, while our poles are yet being sought by men.

The charts made by the Abbee show the so-called seas of Mars which astronomers now call a misnomer, for it has been suggested that nearly all the moisture of Mars is concentrated in Winter in the ice caps of the poles. In the summer the ice caps melt and it is suggested that the Martians lead their attenuated water supply along the canals to the equatorial regions. Lines representing these canals are distinguished by astronomers and the sudden appearance at some seasons of double lines leads to the theory that the overflowing of the canals brings about luxurious vegetation, or that the double lines are really deep valleys of which the higher parts are more distinctly visible than the depressions.

The learned Abbe's charts are highly instructive but the Lowell photographs explain away many things that these charts only raise doubts about.

Signals From Mars.

There has long been a theory that the men of Mars—far advanced beyond us—have been trying for years to signal to the earth. Strange masses of color seen from time to time on that planet led to the suggestion that they were really big fires or lights made to attract our attention to the commencement of some species of communication.

Mars, nearest to the earth on July 6, was 35,000,000 miles from us and is already speeding further away at a rapid rate, so that it will be years before we get such a chance as was recently offered to learn her secrets.

Daring French Theories.

The French astronomers, always daring with their theories and jumping readily at conclusions, say that the canals prove there are people on Mars, and that undoubtedly they are looking down on us and with their more advanced minds are able to study our movements with their powerful glasses.

The cold, scientific mind of the Yankee hesitates at such broad jumping into conclusions. Professor Lowell sees the canals and tells what he sees—but concludes little. He dare not project his imagination into what be would term absurd lengths.

Professor Lowell sees in Mars a wonderful system of orderly canals linking up the polar snow water with the arid regions of the equator. These canals are not always visible, but appear at Spring time when the polar snows have melted, and the effect of the water has been felt along the edges of these troughs. What the telescope sees, he maintains, are bands of vegetation which grow blue with the Summer's crop and which gradually change to a gold brown in the autumn, when they die away. Another strange feature is the doubling of the canals.

Mystery of the Canals.

The canals are seen with startling rapidity to become double, a duplicate line following the course of the original canal. This was thought by many to be an optical effect, but the explanation is hardly adequate, as only a small proportion of the canals appear to be double. "What, then," recently wrote Mr. Lowell, "are these so-called canals? The best answer consists in pointing to the Nile. What we call the canals are narrow belts from ten to twenty miles wide on the average." The flow occurs twice a year, first from one pole then from the other. Nothing known to physics could cause it, for the flow takes place in defiance of the laws of gravity. So far as it can be measured the flow advances down the latitudes with regular speed fifty-two miles a day."

BOY HELD FOR MAN'S DEATH IN QUARREL

Autopsy Today on Body of John Singleton, Whose Skull Was Fractured.

STRUCK DOWN IN HALLWAY

Special to the Boston American.

PITTSFIELD, N. H., July 24.—John Nutter, nineteen years old, is held by the police of this town pending an investigation into the death of John Singleton, aged fifty years, at their boarding house on Bank street last night.

Singleton's death is believed to have been due to a fractured skull and an autopsy has been ordered.

According to the story told by Nutter, Singleton came in the house at a late hour and tried to force an entrance into Nutter's room. Nutter came out and the two had some words. During the argument that followed Singleton was struck. He fell in the hallway, striking his head against the wall.

Physicians were called to the house, but nothing could be done for the injured man and he died without regaining consciousness.

In Singleton's trunk were found some letters dated Pawtucket, R. I., and signed by his wife. They were old letters. One of the dead man's acquaintances said that Singleton had told him that he had a wife and family living in Charlestown, Mass. He had been here but a short time and was employed in a local tailoring establishment.

Nutter protests his innocence of any intent to injure Singleton.

DAVIES IN "ERMINIE."

Harry Davies sang the part of Eugene in "Erminie" at the Castle Square in place of George Tallman last evening. He was in splendid voice. Mr. Tallman will sing this afternoon, and for the remainder of the week the two singers will alternate in the character.

THOUSANDS USE FREE TICKETS OF AMERICAN

Coupon Plan Is Enthusiastically Commended by the Public.

PRONOUNCED BIG SUCCESS

As an illustration of the success of the SUNDAY AMERICAN coupon plan for the Summer parks and Revere Beach amusements, the Theatre Comique took in 1900 half fare coupons in one day last week. The Musical Railway received over 2,000 during the week, the Roller Coaster management says it is a wonderful help to business. The three Flying Horse emporiums on the Boulevard received hundreds daily. Fairyland Theatre, The Automobile Race, Mystic Rill and Rollaway Rink managers like the plan better with every passing week.

See next Sunday's AMERICAN for additional coupons for Boulevard and Avenue at the leading attractions in Revere.

At Lexington Park a comic opera entitled "The Mascot," is being played daily to big audiences by very capable actors. The theatre and dance hall are about the only paid attractions in the park and there are many free attractions.

The SUNDAY AMERICAN coupons give admission, at the gate, which ordinarily costs ten cents. It is one of the nicest family parks in existence.

At beautiful Canobie Lake Park the coupons to be published in next Sunday's AMERICAN will give free admission to the big theatre, the merry-go-round, the House of Mirth, and the Laughing Gallery. This makes a combination of attractions otherwise costing twenty-five cents and which the American gives free on two days of the week. The theatre show is "The Pretty Persian," which conveys a great deal of historical instruction.

GIRL SHOOTS HER RICH SWEETHEART

LOS ANGELES, Cal., July 24.—George T. Bennett, proprietor of the Bennett Electrical Company, has been shot and killed by Estelle Corwell, a young woman whom he had known for the last five years. According to Miss Corwell, Bennett was about to desert her.

FIRE FROM WASTE; $500.

Fire, which started in wooden barrels in which waste paper had been thrown, caused a lively blaze early to-day in the basement of No. 357 Boylston street, occupied by W. H. Elliot as a wholesale department in his florist business. Damage $500.

MAXIM SAVES 2 GIRLS IN LAKE

MORRISTOWN, N. J., July 24.—Demonstrating that he can save life as well as devise means to destroy it, Hudson Maxim, the inventor of Brooklyn, who has but one arm, plunged into Lake Hopatcong last night and brought two drowning young women ashore. The rescue was made off Maxim Park, where the inventor has a Summer cottage. The women are still in a serious condition from physical exhaustion and shock. They are Miss Anna Marz of Anchor Lodge and Miss Susie Williams, a maid at the Maxim cottage.

$100.000 FROM MRS. SAGE.

SYRACUSE, N. Y., July 24.—Chancellor S. R. Day of Syracuse University, who is at Newman, Essex County, has announced that he had received a check for $100,000 from Mrs. Russell Sage as a gift to the Teachers' College of Syracuse University.

TRY TO WRECK RUTLAND FLYER

BENNINGTON, Vt., July 24.—An attempt was made yesterday afternoon to wreck the Northbound flyer on the Rutland railroad, the wreckers placing ties across the rails. As the flyer was late the engineer on freight discovered the ties and averted an accident. Several attempts have been made of late to wreck the flyer.

KHEDIVE OF EGYPT INCOGNITO IN PARIS

PARIS, July 24.—The Khedive of Egypt, Abbas Hilmi, spent two days in Paris in such strict incognito that his presence did not become known until after his departure for Switzerland. He will visit England before returning to Egypt.

HOW STRIPES MAKE THE FIGURE SLIGHT

Gown Of Striped Black And White French Voile

BY GRACE HYMAN

IT is undoubtedly true that stripes have a tendency to make people look much slighter than plain or figure material; therefore, this model is one to be avoided by the slender girl and much worn by the stout or matronly.

The very finest French voiles are particularly pretty in stripes. This gown was made of one of the newest styles of this material in black and white, with a fine blue line running down the edge of the stripe.

The waist is in surplice style, with a band of pale blue watered ribbon coming from under a band of fine Irish embroidery. The skirt is finished at the foot with three bands of satin ribbon and buttons in clusters of three at intervals.

ADVICE TO THE LOVELORN

By Beatrice Fairfax

CAN THIS BE LOVE?

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

Two weeks ago I attended an outing at Celtic Park and made the acquaintance of a young Irish girl in the dancing pavilion. She was rather forward and forced her company on me, so that I took it for granted that it was a case of love at first sight. I saw the girl home and, strangely enough, she asked me to keep company with her in the future. I promised, but have not yet fulfilled it, and am now awaiting your advice. I am in a queer position over it, as I have kept company with another young lady for close on a year. Would you advise me to give up the old love for the new, though our acquaintance was brought about without an introduction? Anticipating early advice, as I am bewildered over it. I. B.

IF your love for the first girl can be so easily forgotten, it could not have been very much worth while. I think you would make a great mistake to transfer your attentions to a girl who is so bold and immodest as to ask for them. It is the custom for a woman to wait until a man shows that he wishes to be friends with her before she intimates her feelings for him; then it is her privilege to refuse or to accept, as judgment decides.

The Boston American Pattern

A Stylish Little Suit

No. 5,800—The smart little suit here illustrated is a very popular one with mothers, as it is so quickly and easily made. The back and front of the dress is cut in one piece; it simply slips on over the head and buttons under the arms. The little trousers are made in genuine knickerbocker style, full at the knees and open at the sides. They are held in place at the knees by elastics. The dress would also be a good model for the little man who has not yet arrived at the trousers age, as it could be made in the light-weight woolens and be worn with a guimpe. For a child of 4 years 2½ yards of 36-inch material will be required for the making.

No. 5,800—Sizes for 2, 4 and 6 years.

Good Reasons Why Every Girl Should Save Some Money

By Beatrice Fairfax

GIRLS, it's a long time since we had a talk on the money saving question.

You have all bought your Summer frills and furbelows, and now is the time to save before the Winter expenses loom in sight. I know it is desperately hard to put the money away in a prosaic old bank when there are so many pretty things just crying out to be bought, but try to be strong and resist the temptations.

Perhaps you have already started your bank account and it has reached a nice little sum. If you have not, begin it to-day.

If you can manage to save even fifty cents a week it will be better than nothing at all. The small sums grow into large ones if you only keep at them perseveringly.

Save enough to have a little pin money. Then you won't have to go to your husband for every cent you spend.

Be Independent

AND if you don't marry, save enough to be an independent, self-reliant, capable spinster.

Don't be foolish and lend your money to some man who tells you that he will double it for you. It is your money; you have made it and you are the one to take care of it.

Remember that every cent saved now means more ease and comfort in your old age.

You can do without many comforts now because you are young and strong and enthusiastic. It is more fun and excitement to spend your money on pleasure.

But the days are coming when you will have to depend on many comforts that you ignore now. Look out for those days now while you are able to provide for them.

Encourage your young men friends to save also. You can do a great deal for them if you will try to keep them from being extravagant on your account.

A Test of Men

SOME girls seem to think that the supreme test of a man's devotion rests on the amount of money he is willing to spend on his sweetheart. In my opinion a man pays a girl a greater compliment when he wants to save for her sake than he does when he squanders money upon her.

When he saves it means that he is anxious to reach a position where he can afford to marry.

When he spends it simply means that he is generous because he has no special reason to save.

A sensible, prudent girl makes a thrifty wife, and any man of common sense is quick to realize the fact.

So, dear girls, be wise and save your money for your own sake and for the sake of the young men who will be lucky enough some day to win you for helpmates.

Cook Book Free For Choice Recipes

THE writer of every recipe printed below receives a copy of the BOSTON AMERICAN Economy Cook Book, a substantial indexed blankbook of 210 pages, bound in heavy oilcloth, especially designed to preserve these recipe gems in permanent form.

SOUR MILK DOUGHNUTS

ONE cup sugar, two eggs, four tablespoons of soft butter; add one tablespoon of soda dissolved in a little water, one large cup sour milk, one-half tablespoon of salt; then add two cups of flour, sifted with one teaspoon of cream tartar; more flour may be required. Let the dough rest a while, then roll out half an inch thick and cut with a doughnut cutter. Fry in hot fat and sprinkle with sugar.

GINGER BEER

HERE is the recipe which Mrs. J. Williamson asked for: Boil one gallon of water and two teaspoons of ground ginger for half an hour; add one teacup of sugar, one teaspoon of cream of tartar, white of one egg; then let it stand till lukewarm; add one cake of yeast; cover up the same as you would bread; let it stand for twelve hours. Then drain in a flannel bag twice. Bottle and let it stand in a warm place for twenty-four hours, when it will be ready for drinking.

ESCALLOPED POTATOES

BUTTER a dish and then slice potatoes and onions. Put a layer of onions first, then a layer of potatoes, until the dish is full; season each layer of potatoes with a little salt and pepper, and pour sweet milk over them. Use enough milk to cover all. Then put in the oven and bake.

SUCCOTASH

Boil one quart of lima beans or string beans until they are tender. Cut down in the middle of the grains of twelve ears of corn and scrape. Then drain off water from beans and add the corn, season with salt, pepper and butter. If it is too dry add a little cream or milk. Cook twenty minutes after you add the corn.

EDITH M. TEMPLE.
No. 12 High street, Marlboro.

CHILI SAUCE

FIFTY ripe tomatoes, twenty-five onions, twelve green peppers; chop fine and add one gallon of vinegar, three cups of sugar, one tablespoonful of allspice, cloves and cinnamon, two tablespoonfuls of salt. Boil two hours and one-half; then put in glass jars.

MRS. FRASER.

VASELINE IS GOOD FOR SHOES

AN excellent preservative of shoe leather is vaseline. If a small quantity be applied to new shoes it will soften the leather, and if enamelled leather, will keep it soft much longer than ordinarily and render it less liable to crack.

If worn shoes are cleaned and blackened and then rubbed with the vaseline, their appearance and wearing qualities will be much improved.

Have a box of oats handy, and when the shoes are taken off remove all mud and dirt, lace or button them, fill half full with oats and stuff the tops with crumpled paper.

When necessary to wear the shoes empty them, and they will be found to have kept their shape, and will not be drawn if they were in the least damp when taken off.

"MEN are so blind," she remarked. "You watch next time you are close to her, Mr. Brooks."

"I will," he promised. "I'll get her between me and a window in a strong north light."

"So Severe"

Selina laughed.

"Don't be too unkind," she said. "That's the worst of you men. When you do find anything out you are always so severe."

"After all, though," Louise remarked, with a sidelong glance, "it must be very, very interesting to meet this sort of people even if one doesn't quite belong to their set. I should think you must find every one else quite tame, Mr. Brooks."

"I can assure you I don't," he answered, coolly. "This evening has provided me with quite as pleasant society as ever I should wish for."

Selina beamed upon him.

"Oh, Mr. Brooks, you are terrible. You do say such things!" she declared, archly.

Louise laughed a little hardly.

"We mustn't take too much to ourselves, dear," she said. "Remember that Mr. Brooks walked all the way up from the Secular Hall with Mary."

Mr. Bullsom threw down his paper with a little impatient exclamation.

"Come, come!" he said. "I want to have a few words with Brooks myself, if you girls'll give me a chance. Heard anything from Henslow lately, eh?"

Brooks leaned forward.

"Not a word!" he answered.

Mr. Bullsom grunted.

"H'm! He's taken his seat, and that's all he does seem to have done. To have heard his last speech here before polling time you would have imagined him with half a dozen questions down before now. He's letting the estimates go by, too. There are half a dozen obstructors, all faddists, but Henslow, with a real case behind him, is sitting tight. 'Pon my word, I'm not sure that I like the fellow."

"I ventured to write to him the other evening," Brooks said, "and I have sent him all the statistics we promised. He seems to have regarded my letter as an impertinence, though, for he has never answered it."

"You mark my words," Mr. Bullsom said, doubling the paper up and bringing it down viciously upon his knee. "Henslow will never sit again for Medchester. There was none too much push about him last session, but he smoothed us all over somehow. He'll not do it again. I'm losing faith in the man, Brooks."

Brooks was genuinely disturbed. His own suspicions had been gathering strength during the last few weeks. Henslow had been pleasant enough, but a little flippant after the election. From London he had promised to write to Mr. Bullsom, as chairman of the election committee, mapping out the course of action which in pursuance of his somewhat daring pledges, he proposed to embark upon. This was more than a month ago, and there had come not a single word from him. All that vague distrust which Brooks had sometimes felt in the man was rekindled and increased and with it came a flood of bitter thoughts. Another opportunity then was to be lost. For seven years longer these thousands of pallid, heart-weary men and women were to suffer, with no one to champion their cause. He saw again that sea of eager faces in the market place, lit with a sudden gleam of hope as they listened to the bold words of the man who was promising them life and hope and better things. Surely if this was a betrayal it was an evil deed, not passively to be borne.

Hasty Summons

Mr. Bullsom had refreshed himself with whiskey-and-water, and decided that pessimism was not a healthy state of mind.

"I tell you what it is, Brooks," he said, more cheerfully, "we mustn't be too previous in judging the fellow. Let's write him civilly, and if nothin comes of it in a week or two we will run up to London, you and me, eh? and just haul him over the coals."

"You are right, Mr. Bullsom," Brooks said. "There is nothing we can do for the present."

"Please don't talk any more horrid politics," Selina said. "We want Brooks to give us a lesson in billiards. Do you mind?"

Brooks rose at once.

"I shall be charmed!" he declared.

Mr. Bullsom rose also.

"Pooh, pooh!" he said. "Brooks and I will have a hundred up and you can watch us. That'll be lesson enough for you."

Selina made a little grimace, but they all left the room together. In the hall a housemaid was speaking at the telephone and a moment afterward she laid the receiver down and came toward them.

"It is a message for Mr. Brooks, sir, from the Queen's Hotel. Lord Arranmore's compliments, and the ladies from Enton are at the theatre this evening, and would be glad if Mr. Brooks would join them at the Queen's Hotel for supper at 11 o'clock."

Brooks hesitated, but Mr. Bullsom spoke up at once.

"Off you go, Brooks," he said, firmly. "Don't you go refusing an invitation like that. Lord Arranmore is a bit eccentric, they say, and he isn't the sort of man to like refusals. You've just got time."

"They had the message two hours ago, and have been trying everywhere to find Mr. Brooks," the housemaid added.

Selina helped him on with his coat.

"Will you come another evening soon and play billiards with us?" she asked, dropping her voice a little.

"With pleasure," Brooks answered. "Do you mind saying goodby to your cousin for me? I am sorry not to see her again."

CHAPTER X.

The Supper Party

BROOKS was shown into a private room at the Queen's Hotel, and he certainly had no cause to complain of the warmth of his welcome. Lady Sybil, in fact, made room for him at her side, and he fancied that there was a gleam of reproach in her eyes as she looked up at him.

"Is Medchester really so large a place that one can get lost in it?" she asked. "Lord Arranmore has been sending messengers in every direction ever since we decided upon our little excursion."

"I telephoned to your office, sent a groom to your rooms and to the club, and at last we had given you up," Lord Arranmore remarked.

"And I," Sybil murmured, "was in a shocking bad temper."

"It is very good of you all," Brooks remarked cheerfully. "I left the office rather early, and have been giving a sort of lecture to-night at the Secular Hall. Then I went up to have a game of billiards with Mr. Bullsom. Your telephone message found me there. You must remember that even if Medchester is not a very large place I am a very unimportant person."

"Dear me, what modesty," Lady Caroom remarked, laughing. "To us, however, you happened to be very important. I hate a party of three."

Brooks helped himself to a quail, and remembered that he was hungry.

"This is very unusual dissipation, isn't it?" he asked. "I never dreamed that you would be likely to come into our little theatre."

No Excuse

"It was Sybil's doings," Lady Caroom answered. "She declared that she was dull, and that she had never seen 'A Message from Mars.' I think that all that serious talk the other evening gave her the blues."

"I am always dull in the Winter when there is no hunting," Sybil remarked. "This frost is abominable. I have not forgotten out talk either. I feel positively wicked every time I sip champagne."

"Our young philanthropist will reassure you," Arranmore remarked dryly.

Lady Caroom sighed.

"I wonder how it is," she murmured, "that one's conscience and one's digestion both grow weaker as one grows old. You and I, Arranmore, are content to accept the good things of the earth as they come to us."

TO BE CONTINUED.

Helpful Tips for Travelers WHEN OFF ON VACATION DON'T:

CRITICIZE too closely the way things are done.

Be too friendly with hotel or other servants; they do not understand it.

Allow strangers to scrape acquaintance in trains or hotels.

Carry your ticket and money in the same pocket.

Expert Tells Secrets of How to Avoid Woman's Bugaboo--Wrinkles

BY THE PROFESSOR

WRINKLES, those fell destroyers of women's beauty, are frequently originated in sleeping, the position of the head and face being to blame.

It is difficult—nay, impossible—to regulate one's sleeping position, but when a person is fully awake care should be taken to avoid frowning or contorting the face in any manner which would leave telltale marks.

Scowling is often indulged in without a person being aware of it. Without realizing it, the mouth frequently is drawn to one side in the act of smiling, and, in fact, one unwittingly falls into a number of bad habits without knowing it.

A set expression is not conducive to the preservation of youth, as the lines become accentuated by a constant recurrent expression.

Persons with mobile faces are less liable to wrinkles, as the play of the muscles is ever changing.

Unthinking people wonder why actors and actresses preserve a youthful appearance, although advanced in years. These people constantly are playing parts which require a change of facial expression. Therefore the muscles of the countenance are exercised and do not become set and rigid.

Extremes of heat and cold are conducive to wrinkles.

Cold cracks the skin and heat wrinkles and dries up the natural oil and makes it colorless.

Apartments should be kept at a moderate temperature in order to insure health and beauty.

If the skin feels drawn and stiff it must be lubricated with some good emollient before retiring.

In washing the face, soap should seldom be used, the bran bag sufficing for all purposes of cleanliness.

There is nothing better than simple corn meal not too finely ground; it cleanses the pores of the skin thoroughly and leaves it soft and satiny.

Corn meal and bran bags are easily made, and are much less expensive than the bought ones; some bran or corn meal, with shaved castile soap and orris root, are the necessary ingredients.

They should be sewed up in a cheesecloth bag and rubbed on the face and hands each time they are washed.

BUST DEVELOPMENT

DEAR PROFESSOR:

Will you please give me directions how to develop and harden the bust, also the formula for the Vaucaire remedy? VIOLA.

MAKE a cream of five ounces each of lanoline and fresh mutton tallow, four ounces each of cocoanut oil, oil of sweet almonds and toilet water, half an ounce of spermaceti, one dram of tincture of benzoin and twenty drops of oil of neroli. Melt the oils, add slowly the liquids, beating all the time, then last the benzoin and perfume. Massage the bust with this every night, using a gentle circular motion. Bathe the bust every morning with cold water to harden the tissues. Use a dash of clear alcohol or warm vinegar also daily. The Vaucaire formula should be compounded by a druggist. It consists of three fluid drams of liquid extract of galega (goat's-rue), 154 grains of lacto phosphate of lime, [illegible] grains of tincture of fennel, thirteen and a half ounces of simple sirup. The dose is two soupspoonfuls with water before each meal. Dr. Vaucaire also advocates the drinking of malt extract during meals.

SCARS AFTER X-RAY

DEAR PROFESSOR:

Will you kindly give me a remedy for scars left on my neck after X-ray treatment? A sore was left after the treatment, and when this healed it left a red scar which is almost brown at the edges. NELLIE.

TRY the following salve: Two drams of lanoline mixed with one dram of biniodide of mercury. Rub in well once a day and do not get discouraged if it takes some time to eradicate the scars. Bathing the brown edges twice a day with peroxide will help to bleach them.

TOMORROW'S BEST BARGAINS IN BOSTON'S BIG STORES

DO not fail to see the following values which will be offered to you over the bargain counters on Thursday:

NOYES BROTHERS have an offering to delight the most fastidious, in white linen parasols, reduced from $6 to $3. These have the detachable cover, which can be easily removed and laundered, and there are only 25 in the lot, with covers in two styles, plain and polka dots. They have elegant white enameled handles.

JORDAN-MARSH COMPANY have a millinery bargain in modish Sumatra braid, untrimmed hats—the new Ranchero shape—which they offer for 50 cents each. These are very light and durable, and altogether desirable just at this season.

A. SHUMAN CO. has on sale soft silk negligee collars, in all colors, 50 cent values at the special price of 2 for 25 cents; good for both men and women.

WOLF'S, "My Clothier," will place on sale a quantity of women's 25 cent bows, jabots and windsor ties, such as are worn with embroidered collars, at 17 cents. They are nearly all colors and about all styles.

MacDONNELL'S Tremont Temple store offers as a special for Thursday about 200 of their celebrated "Johnny Jones" white lawn waists at 79 cents each. This price is for Thursday only. Friday morning they will be 98 cents. This is a cool and most comfortable outing waist.

VORENBERG'S will put $2.50 silver quadruple plate fruit or salad bowls on special sale to-morrow for $1.29. These are in handsome rose and rosebud patterns and are values that should not escape your notice.

BACON'S Uptown Department Store offers women's 75-cent bath slippers in blue, red and drab, for 39 cents a pair.

SHEPARD NORWELL CO. will sell for one day their 10-cent huck towels for 8 cents each.

JAMES A. HOUSTON will offer 95-cent petticoats, in gingham and striped percale, for 50 cents; also $1 taped girdles, with garters attached, for 50 cents.

TIMOTHY SMITH CO., whose store is open Thursday evenings, will sell 59-cent chemise night robes for 39 cents, extra full, with round neck and elbow sleeves edged with narrow lace.

THE MODEL, on Winter street, offers to-morrow an odd lot of all-wool mixture coats, half-fitted and loose back styles, in values from $6 to $8, for $2.95; also 110 white waists, slightly soiled from handling, $1 to $2 values, for 55 cents each.

FILENE'S will have a small lot of wash dresses, of chambray and white lawn, in neat tailored style, with flounced skirt, regular $1.50 values, for 70 cents.

HOW TO DECORATE THE TABLE

LITTLE imitation fruit trees in full bloom with tiny apples hanging from the branches, regardless of the fact that fruit trees showing both blossoms and fruit at one time rather mix the seasons, are new and favorite decorations for the table.

Another particularly handsome scheme is a tall, polished brass urn, filled with deep purple fleur de lis and ferns. At its base purple pansies and asparagus ferns are arranged to form a seven-pointed star and at every point stands a brass candlestick, the white shades of which are edged with a hanging fringe of purple beads.

Bonbon cases shaped like purple iris make a fitting accompaniment to this.

SOMETHING

You may see and talk with a lady who has had the lines and wrinkles removed, from one-half the face, leaving the other side to show all the wrinkled and flabby skin that formerly covered the entire face. Try to realize this startling fact. One side of her face shows all the traces of age; the other side shows all the smooth brightness of girlhood—youth and age are in the same face.

It is done without electricity, without tedious massage and without cutting or the use of any surgical instrument. It is done by nourishing, strengthening and building up the weakened and relaxed underlying muscles and by reviving the action of the corium or true skin, thus restoring a youthful facial contour and a bright girlish complexion. No matter how deep or how many your wrinkles may be—no matter how dead or sallow your skin may be—the famous Woodbury Method changes its texture and leaves it clear, smooth and velvety. Our methods are based upon scientific principles, are entirely painless, and the cost is moderate. Whether you call or write, your inquiry will be treated with strict professional confidence, and every question will be answered without placing you under the slightest obligation.

New England Woman Flees from Asylum, Blames Her Sister for Imprisonment

Suffering Only from Tuberculosis, Yet Immured Among the Insane.

EX-GOVERNOR'S COUSIN

NEW YORK, July 24.—Mrs. Janet E. Robinson, a cultured New England woman, cousin of Ex-Governor Batchelder, of New Hampshire, made her escape from the Rivercrest Asylum for the Insane at Astoria, L. I., a few days ago, and is now in hiding in this city.

The escape from a locked ward in this sanitarium is the climax to a sensational story of her efforts to gain assistance through organized charity in this city. She declares that she is suffering only from incipient tuberculosis and that she was railroaded to Rivercrest institution as an insane patient.

She blames the Charity Organization Society and her sister, Miss Ethel G. Emery, a teacher of Havana, Cuba, who is now in this city on vacation, for her plight. She says she is convinced detectives are still trailing her in an effort to recommit her.

Mrs. Robinson has convinced some powerful friends, including the Rev. Madison C. Peters, that she is entirely sane. They will endeavor to induce some charitably disposed person to send her to a quiet farm until her nerves recover from the shock of her experience. She then hopes to go West and take up her occupation as a stenographer.

Suppressed News of Escape.

News of Mrs. Robinson's escape was not made public by the management of the sanitarium. When questioned about it by Mrs. Robinson's friends they said they had "permitted her to leave," as they had no legal authority to hold her.

A BOSTON AMERICAN correspondent saw Mrs. Robinson at the home of the Rev. Madison C. Peters, at No. 1,822 Glenwood road, Brooklyn. She is a woman of charming manner, remarkably well educated, and told of her trials in search of health by the charity route in a most rational manner.

"I was born in Andover, N. H.," said she, "and married an Englishman, with whom I lived in London until his death 8 years ago. I was a charter member of the Society of American Women in London, and came to New York when my husband died.

"I was living at No. 40 West Thirtieth street when I was taken ill last Christmas, and spent five weeks in Bellevue. I tried to work when I was discharged, but could not, and applied to my sister, Ethel G. Emery, for aid, and she said she could do nothing for me.

"I then appealed to a well-known manufacturer of this city, and by him was referred to the Charity Organization Society. After many examinations by Board of Health doctors they said I had incipient tuberculosis, and sent me to Bay Brook, in the Adirondacks.

Says She Was Treated Badly.

"It was a rough place and they treated me badly. Dr. M. P. Burnham, who has since been dismissed, told me that it was no place for a woman with my nerves, and I came back to New York.

"My case was taken up by the Bellevue clinic. Dr. J. Alexander Miller, who had heard tales from Dr. Burnham, said that I was in poor nervous condition and wanted to send me to Bellevue for examination. Other doctors pronounced me perfectly sane. As my health got no better I was sent to St. Luke's, where a serious operation was performed.

"Then the Charity Society found a place for me at No. 56 West Eleventh street, and I was told to report daily at the health boat at the foot of Sixteenth street. The matron one day made me eat at the second table. When I sat down I pushed away some dirty dishes. She called out to me sharply, and after telling her that I would not submit to such harsh treatment I left the boat.

"My sister had come from Havana and together we went to see Secretary Kennedy of the society. He took the part of the matron and said I was no longer wanted on the boat.

Scene in Restaurant.

"On July 10 my sister had a long talk with Mr. Kennedy. Afterward we went to a restaurant on Fourteenth street, where I broke down and cried. My sister called it a scene. She said I must go to a nerve sanitarium and that they had found a nice place out on Long Island and that she would take me there that afternoon.

"I begged to be taken to a farmhouse, though I had no suspicion they were going to take me to an asylum. As soon as I saw the building at Rivercrest I knew what was coming. They let me talk to the doctor about five minutes. Then my sister was with him for an hour.

"'Ethel, I'm not going to stay,' I said when the conference was over.

"'Yes, you must stay,' she declared. "Then she rushed away and they finally persuaded me to go to a room in a ward on the ground floor.

"They all declared that it was not an insane asylum, but I knew when I saw the crazy people all about me. No words can describe that night of terror.

"In the morning I asked a woman who had the next room what sort of a place it was.

"'A place to get your senses back' she said.

She had her hair in strands across her face and there was a crazy light in her eyes.

Fled as Others Breakfasted.

"The other inmates went to breakfast. I was locked in, I suppose because I was crying. Then I remembered a pass key I had in my purse. I tried it and after much effort I unlocked the door.

"I put on my hat and walked out boldly. I had come only the night before and no one knew my face. Some workmen looked at me closely, but let me pass. Once on the road I ran all the way to the car line. I've been hiding in the city and I'd rather die than go back. It would drive me crazy to stay there. I don't know where my sister is and I'm penniless, but I hope to find some one who will help me to health."

"If this woman is crazy," declared Dr. Peters, indignantly yesterday afternoon, "I wish there were more like her. She is as sane as I am and a doctor who is an expert, and whom I had examine her, says so too. It is a shame that a sister and this charity organization should have locked her up in an asylum to get her out of the way. She deserves to be assisted to some quiet place where she can regain her health, then she will be able to care for herself, as she is an expert stenographer."

CAN'T KEEP MACHINIST "BREAKERS" AT WORK

INCOMPETENT MEN HIRED TO CRUSH STRIKE IN FITCHBURG SHOPS.

Special to the Boston American.

FITCHBURG, July 24.—Not even a fine clubhouse, a chef and daily automobile rides with their employers can keep the strike-breakers brought here to take the places of striking machinists, at work. Donald Tulloch, secretary of the Metal Trades Association, who is here directing the strike for the employers, has been told to get machinists and keep them, but he can't.

Among the seventy men at work in the machine shops there are a few who know what tools are. The others had to be told when they went to work.

Twelve men got out of the Bath grinder works yesterday afternoon somewhat hurriedly. They said they learned they were going to be discharged. The reason was that they were not machinists, neither were they apt students.

Machinists Hard to Get.

Machinists are hard to get at this time of year, say the strikers, who are rejoicing at the troubles their former employers have had with them imported help, and see a quick termination of the strike, now in its third week.

Protest has gone up against the housing of the men in the old quarters of the Fitchburg Athletic Association. Residents in the vicinity last night pointed to the crowd of men seated on the curbstone, littering the street and taking possession of a good part of the postoffice grounds.

They were not an ideal-looking crowd. Most of them looked as though the sumptuous baths in the clubhouse had not been visited more often than absolutely necessary.

"They boasted to us that they could get plenty of good American citizens to take the places of the strikers," said one citizen. "Maybe they can, but I have been listening to that crowd over there and I believe I heard at least three different languages, with only a scattering of bad English here and there. That's what they have brought here to take the places of as good a crowd of boys as Fitchburg has."

But Donald Tulloch is optimistic. "We are going to come out all right," he said, even after the twelve had quit, with demands for their pay and transportation back to New York.

"Will Be Square," Says Tulloch.

He added: "We will do only the square thing in any and every case, and although there is no obligation on the part of the Metal Trades Association to pay the fares of these men back to New York, it will do so. This cry of not knowing what they signed when they placed their signatures to a contract is good material for the striking machinists to use as a means of prejudicing the Fitchburg citizens against the Metal Trades Association, but any fair minded man can realize what a weak subterfuge it is. They are not compelled to sign a contract and do so at all times of their own free will.

"The affairs are progressing finely as far as the Metal Trades Association is concerned and the strike will be ended in a few days, for we shall have all the places filled with competent workmen."

The strikers believe that they have the sympathy of a large part of the citizens of Fitchburg. They point to Rev. Archibald McCord, acting pastor of the Rollstone Congregational Church, who supported them from the pulpit, as an example.

"Can't Get Competent Men."

"If Tulloch can get competent workmen to stay with that crowd he has here now, he is a wonder," said one of the strikers. "Not even the clubhouse and the feed they are giving them will induce decent men to stay here long even if they do come. That's what we figure is going to let us win this strike. Why, of the crowd that arrived here yesterday there were ten men that couldn't speak a word of English, and they are trying to make out that they have hired skilled workmen."

The Metal Trades Association is paying these men more money than the old employes received.

RAISE SUNKEN STEAMER.

BREMERHAVEN, July 24.—The water has been entirely pumped out of the steamer Kaiser Wilhelm II., that listed Saturday night at her dock here during coaling operations and become partially filled. She will be ready for service in five days.

27 SHIPWRECKED MEN ARRIVE IN BOSTON

Telling a thrilling tale of shipwreck during a terrific gale off the treacherous coast of the northland, twenty-seven French sailors of the steam trawler Capelon, which went down off the Grand Banks on July 8, and the brigatine Yvonne Valentine, which ran on the jagged rocks off Portaux Basques July 4, arrived in this city late last night on their way to New York, from which place they will take the steamer for their homes in France.

DRAG LAKE FOR BODY.

BURLINTON, Vt., July 24.—Hiram Merrihew, a rich farmer of this city, has been absent from his home a week, and as his clothes were found on the breakwater searching parties are now dragging the lake for his body.

DOVES NOW ON THEIR WAY TO WINDY CITY

En route to Chicago are the Doves today with full equipment on board as President Dovey said he needed all his players on this trip as he intended that it should be more successful than the last western pilgrimage.

The one object of the team will be to get even with the Cubs for three straight defeats they received on the home field. There are four games with the Cubs and it is a safe prediction that the Doves will get a share of the whole.

President Dovey with Pfeffer, Randall and Sweeney will leave the team at Buffalo and journey to Bonesetter Reese at Youngstown, Ohio, the expert at mending human fractured framework and especially skillful in handling the troubles of ball tossers. Pfeffer says he is ready to go in the game but Mr. Dovey wants him to have a thorough investigation of his arm which he threw out on the last trip of the team and he thinks the doctor will decide whether the big college twirler should go into the box yet.

Randall Has Wrenched Knee.

Randall has a wrenched knee to be inspected and Sweeney is lame with a twisted ankle, but the Bonesetter will make them both sound again.

Barney Dreyfus came all the way from Pittsburg to see President Dovey in regard to a trade for "Cy" Young, but the conference over the deal did not bring out anything.

"They tried to give me the worst end of it," said President Dovey, "but I refused to bite. Dreyfus wants to give me a cash offer for Young, too, but I told him that Young was not for sale and he is not on the market.

"My object is to strengthen the team and the only way I can do it is to make a good trade. What good would money be to me in strengthening the club. I want players and the only way to get good ones is in a trade as that was convincive when we got Ritchey, Beaumont and Flaherty.

"I have abundance of confidence that Young will yet be a good pitcher, but we can't wait for him to reach that stage when there are opportunities for bolstering up the team where it is most needed.

"I want a catcher and I made Dreyfus an offer for Eddie Phelps, but it was no good; but I am not discouraged by any means."

Doves Beat Pirates.

The Doves wound up the series with the Pirates in a most satisfactory manner by beating them 5 to 3 and Barney Dreyfus was on hand to see his stars trimmed.

Vic Willis, who all Hub fans remember was kind to us, made one of the easiest miscues that could happen and presented the game to the locals. Honus Wagner, the great, also slipped up and helped along his old teammate, Pat Flaherty, by making a misplay at a critical moment. If these two had played the game they usually do the Doves would have lost.

Brilliant fielding was the feature which aided the Doves in keeping the warlike Pirates from running away with the game aided by some business-like pitching by Flaherty. Three times were the Pirates nipped in the bud as they were getting ready to start scoring by some sharp doubling up.

Outside of the fourth there was not much signs of scoring by the Doves till the eighth loomed up and then the fun commenced. Needham and Flaherty opened with singles. Bridwell sacrificed and Tenney walked filling the bases. Wagner in his haste to make a double play failed to grasp Brain's grounder and Needham scored. Beaumont bunted and Willis had an easy assist at the plate to force Flaherty but he scooped up the ball over Gibson's head and both Flaherty and Tenney scored. Brain came home on Bates' single. Beaumont tried to score but was nailed by Anderson from right field.

The Pirates' three runs came from homers by Leach and Wagner.

NOTES OF THE GAME.

There were no flies on that game.

"I wouldn't have missed it for a hundred dollars" said one fan as he went out the gate.

The circus feature was displayed by Tenney when he stabbed Willis's liner in his glove hand and touched first, doubling up Gibson.

Bridwell was again in front with some startling ground scraping of the low ones.

Umpire Carpenter gave another bad exhibition on calling the plate decisions. The fans were better judges than he.

Wagner hit one of the longest licks seen at the grounds this season when he landed the ball over the fence near the extreme left corner.

Beaumont made a perfect throw from deep centre to third base. Nealon, who was on second, thought it wiser to hang to his base.

General Taylor saw the game and met President Barney Dreyfus of the Pirates for the first time.

Claude Ritchey was feeling indisposed and sat in the pavilion. Sweeney covered the second bag.

President Dovey will take three of his players, Pfeffer, Sweeney and Randall, to see Bonesetter Reese at Youngstown, O., to-day, to get his expert opinion on their injuries.

Flaherty got a soaker in the jaw from Needham. Pat was not expecting the return from Tom and the ball struck squarely on the molars. Pat winced a bit but did not let it disturb his pitching.

There was a bunch of young rooters on the first base bleachers from the vacation schools, the guests of President Dovey.

Leach got a lucky homer inside the grounds. Randall was about to gather the ball in when he tripped, going over backwards, and the ball rolled to the left corner.

SHRUBB QUITS IN 2-MILE RUN

Alfred Shrubb, the champion English runner, quit in the third lap of the two-mile race at the Sacred Heart Church games at Caledonia Grove, but says it was because of the poor condition of the track and the big handicaps that he had to give the other contestants. Tom Williams, of Somerville, who had 150 yards advantage, won the event.

LINCOLN CLUB TO OPEN AGAIN

The Cooper Club has secured permanent quarters at Lincoln Hall, Chelsea, and intends to give some fine vaudeville entertainments, in which athletic acts will be the predominating feature. This club has amalgamated with the old Lincoln Club, which for years was one of the most prominent clubs in Chelsea, and the transferral of the membership list to that of the Cooper Club insures a success to the latter organization from the start. It is hoped to have the opening entertainment of the club take place August 2, on which occasion in addition to the vaudeville acts there will be some stellar sparring matches between high class exponents of the manly art.

Tourists Have Run of 96 Miles to Jersey City

GLIDDEN TOUR ENDS TODAY

BY J. C. KERRISON.

Special to the Boston American.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., July 24.—The honor of starting first of the the contestants of the closing ay of the A. A. A. tour fell to Walter White of Cleveland in his White steamer, which up to date has perofrmed with admirable satisfaction, not having lost a single point. White got away promptly at 7 o'clock and was followed at minute intervals by the others who hope to reach Jersey City without suffering penalization.

This, the last day of the tour, is fraught with interest to all and especially to those who have driven 1500 miles without a miss or a break. To them to-day's work is the last supreme test of reliability and efficiency. If the 19 clean score cars can retain their present standing up to the time of their arrival in Jersey then the record of a year ago will have been eclipsed, and that too despite the fact that the mileage and character of the roads covered, was greater and more demanding than was the course of a year ago, when 15 cars finished clean.

That some cars have bene penalized does not by any means indicate that these cars are inefficient. The penalizations in the main have been brought about by spring and tire troubles. That these latter have not been twice as great as they are is the surprise of the tour, as the men have exercised but little care and caution in the use of the same, the banging over the roads at any old speed in order to gain all time possible.

The Goodrich people are very much elated over the record of their tires in this run, twelve of the twenty clean score cars being equipped with Goodrich tires.

No Time Lost in Starting.

No time whatever was lost in getting the cars out of the packing space in City Hall this morning. The crowds were gathered there and at the several hotels to witness the departure of the tourists was as large, if not larger, than seen in any other city en route.

The Maxwell and Premir Confetti cars got away long before 6 o'clock as did also the two prss cars, the Thomas and the Packard. Chairman Hower left at 6:30 o'clock and at 7 o'clock Walter White was under way. Right behind him came Arthur Jervis in the American Peerless which for a novice has done exceptionally well on this tour, showing great speed and excellent staying powers.

Then Geo. Buse, in the Packard, took the road with the other clean score cars in this order: A Moore, Welch; Montgomery Hallowell, Thomas; G. S. Smith, Stoddard; Phillip Flynn, Pierce; C. S. Lea, Walter; F. S. Dey, Pierce; Edward Nobel, Haynes; Charles Burnham, Peerless; Geo. S. Salzmann, Thomas; A. J. Scalfe, White; R. H. Tucker, Royal; G. A. Weidely, Premier; A. Jumpf, Pierce; H. K. Sheridan, White; R. D. Gardner, Pierce; W. C. Straub, Peerless; R. M. Owen, Reo.

Parade in New York.

After these cars came those with penalization and if all get to Jersey City on time they will there be checked out and then parade through New York City to the finish at the headquarters of the A. A. A. in that order, with the single exception that Mrs. Cuneo iwll be given the right of line immediately after the chairman and press cars.

The second from the last day of the Glidden and Hower trophy contests, which came to a close last evening, brought forth no falling down of the club scoremen. In fact, to tell the truth, the day's run of 161 miles was by far the easiest of any day in the tour. It was a regular walk-away, and many are wondering why it was not more difficult. They had arrived at the conclusion that the committee desired no more elimination, when all of a sudden it became known that the schedule for today cals for a twenty-mile-an-hour gait, and that, too, with a great proportion of the run through New Jersey, in which State the speed and other laws are most strictly enforced.

To make the run of ninety-six miles in the allotted five and one-half hours to Jersey City the machines will be forced to travel all the time, and if any one of them meets with a slight mishap, even the puncturing of a tire, it will surely mean a falling off in the excellency of their score. Last evening the tourists were royally entertained by the Quaker City Motor Club with an informal entertainment and lunch at the Majestic.

The decorative features of the recent Elks celebration in this city, including the Court of Honor, have remained intact, and were thoroughly illuminated last evening for the benefit of the tourists.

Had To Be Identified.

There was a complication regarding hotel arrangements while in this city. The Bellevue-Stratford was originally the official headquarters of the tour, but last evening word was received by the tourists at Baltimore that the hotel did not desire to house the party. All the members of the tour had letters directed to the big hotel, and the men have had more or less difficulty in securing the same one of the bright young clerks insisting that persons be identified before mail addressed to them was delivered.

The run of yesterday was an easy one for the cars, and that, too, despite the fact that many of them were in no shape for a hard, serious battle. The distance between Baltimore and Philadelphia had been greatly overestimated, and the schedule announced was such that all of the cars were able to reach Philadelphia two hours ahead of the time for their checking in.

Good treatment was accorded the tourists all along the line, the police of all towns and cities, save a little place called York in Pennsylvania, being perfectly willing that the cars should proceed at a reasonable pace, and in some cases they were permitted to exceed what might be termed reasonable pace.

At Malvern, President A. E. Maltby of the local club met the visitors and virtually presented them with the freedom of the city. At the same point they were met by a representative of the Philadelphia Press, who gave to each car a silken flag that admitted him through the toll gates without charge, and then for the men themselves there were refreshments, both liquid and solid.

Tourists Got Bags of Fruit.

Further along on the road each tourist received a bag of fruit, with the compliments of the Pennsylvania Rubber Company, while in Ardmore the auto car people furnished gasolene and lubricants free of charge to all who desired them. It was a veritable ovation all along the line, and last night the men were royally entertained at the Royal Club.

Two cars fell completely by the wayside during the day, one of them being the ill-fated Welch, which seems to enjoy diving into ditches and running into forbidden places. Just before reaching Paoli the Welch broke a crank shaft, and of course was out of the running. A few miles further along Frank Nutt, with the little Haynes, while going by the Tyler-Maxwell, got his left wheels in a ditch, fracturing the rear axle, so that he, too, had to stop for repairs. He later withdrew as a contestant and announced that he will continue to New York as a tourist.

Fred Pardee and the American Morse had rear construction troubles, his rear springs giving away and his brake shoe becoming disconnected. Pardee completed repairs and arrived at the hotel late last evening, but ready to start on the work to-day.

The tie in the Hower trophy contest between the White and the Stoddard-Dayton, a steamer and a gasolene car, still continues, and promises to be unbroken by the time of the arrival in Jersey City. Of course, there is no telling what a day may bring forth, but it has been suggested that in case these two cars finish clean that they be given a run to Boston and return, an official observer being placed on each who shall take note of everything the operator does to his car. The trophy shall then go to the man who makes the best drive with the least attention to his car.

There is, of course, no difficulty in determining the winner of the Glidden trophy. This year that trophy is a club trophy, and at present Buffalo seems to have a pretty strong hold on the same.

Unless something unexpected happens, and that is what generally happens in motoring circles, Buffalo will for another year at least retain possession of the great, big, troublesome cup.

GAINES GOES TEN ROUNDS WITH CONNOLLY

Jerry Gaines, the market champ, failed to land his famous wallop at the Winnisimmet A. C. last night, when he faced Bartly Connolly, the Biddeford strong boy, and at the end of ten rounds it was a toss up between them who should have had the decision.

Connolly did all the leading, as Jerry was cautious and refused to take a chance, as he has with some of his opponents. Gaines did the greater execution when he did land, as he split Connolly's ear in the early rounds, but he had a lot of respect for the Maine lad's swings.

Gaines's constantly waiting for an opening and Connolly's inability to draw him out marred the bout and made it slower than the fans could have wished for. There was very little fighting in the full ten rounds and no mixing to speak of.

The preliminaries furnished some fine sport, and the three on the card went the limit of six rounds.

Dennie Ryan of Cambridge sprung a surprise by besting Gus Ross, the Italian champ, who knocked Jimmy Hanlon out last week. Kid Freeman punished Charlie Dwyer severely with body punches and slowed him up before the limit. Young McCarron and Young Murray of Lynn had a fast six rounds, with honors about even.

WANT GAME FOR SATURDAY.

The Somerville Athletics, one of the strongest semi-professional teams in the State, would like a game away from home, Saturday, July 28, with team paying reasonable guarantee. R. C. Hammond, 50 Williams street, Medford.

HARNESS RACES AT WOONSOCKET AUGUST 6 TO 11

Secretary B. A. Cook of the Woonsocket, R. I., Driving Park announces his next race meeting for August 6 to 11, which is good news for the followers of the light harness horses, as the last meeting at that track was conducted in a manner meriting attention from those liking clean sport.

The classes for the coming week are for trotters: 2:30, 2:20, 2:23, 2:20, 2:17, 2:14, and free-for-all. Pacers: 2:29, 2:24, 2:21, 217, 2:14, 2:11, and free-for-all. Each are for a purse of $300. Entries to these events close July 30.

Edwin Morse has been engaged by Mr. Cook for salesman the week of August 6, which means that visiting horsemen will be well taken care of in his line.

It is the intention of the management of the park to have the grandstand repaired so that in case of rain the spectators need have no fear of getting wet. The track, too, will be in better condition than it has been in recent meetings, as water, brushing and care will be given it in plenty.

2 HOME RUNS BY M'DERMOTT

District No. 2, the Charlestown battalion of the Boston Fire Department, defeated District No. 5 for the second time at Sullivan Square by a score of 11 to 7. About 1,500 were present. The sensation of the game was the two home runs by Pitcher McDermott with the bases full.

ENGLAND LOSES TENNIS BOWL

LONDON, July 24.—When Norman E. Brookes defeated H. Roper Barrett in the rubber match in the international tennis tourney, the Davis bowl, emblematic of the world's championship, passed from the hands of England to Australia, where it will probably remain for some time to come. The score was 6—2, 6—0, 6—3.

PILGRIMS TO MEET TIGERS HERE TO-DAY

BATTING ORDER.

| BOSTON. | DETROIT. |

There should be some great baseball doings at the Huntington Avenue Baseball Grounds this afternoon when the Pilgrims, after a long and hard tour of the West, play here again, the Tigers being their opponents.

The Bostons are playing better ball now than they have any time in two years. The men are batting and fielding better than ever before, and more life is displayed on the bases than ever shown at the local American League park. Then, too, the box artists are in good form.

The Tigers, who have been playing great ball all season, under the leadership of Hugh Jennings, are in town, and are confident that they will down the Hub aggregation in a majority of games.

It will certainly be a hard task for the Pilgrims to beat the visitors, as just now they are playing the best ball of any team in the league. Jennings has taught his team all the up-to-date tricks of the national pastime, and they may be depended upon to be going at full speed from the beginning to the end of the battle.

"Wild Bill" Donovan, who is at present the star of the visitors' pitching staff, will most likely face the Bostons today, while Jesse Tannehill, who is also going some, will probably work for the locals.

Manager McGuire is very much pleased with the article of ball the Bostons are putting up, and he is confident that if they maintain their present pace, they will be in sixth place before the home series ends.

After the Detroits leave, the crippled Clevelands will visit us, and then the Browns, and finally the World's Champs, the White Sox. At the conclusion of the Sox series, both teams will board the train for the Windy City, where the Pilgrims will open their final Western series, August 2.

RHODE ISLAND CLUB BOUTS

Bartly Connolly of Biddeford, Me., and Brooklyn Jimmy Carroll have been matched at the Standard A. C., Lymansville, R. I., on July 31 in the main bout of fifteen rounds to a decision.

This pair met once before, and put up one of the greatest bouts ever seen in "Little Rhody."

Carroll is noted for his punch, as he put Fred Bradley of Boston away with his wallop and has shortened the careers of many other fighters.

Connolly is one of the toughest middleweights in the ring to-day and has won decisions over well-known ring artists, including such top-notchers as Tommy Sullivan of Lawrence.

STATE RIGHTS DOCTRINE IN NORTH CAROLINA AGAIN

Governor Glenn to Ignore Federal Power in Decision Against Railroads.

By Boston American Leased Wire.

ASHEVILLE, N. C., July 24.—Practically reviving the doctrine of States' rights, Governor R. B. Glenn of North Carolina declares:

"The laws of the State of North Carolina will be enforced," in spite of the decision just handed down by Judge Pritchard of the United States Circuit Court in which the constitutionality of the rate law was denied.

"The prosecution of the charges against the Southern Railway will be continued," adds the Governor, "with all the means I have at hand, and the law will remain in full force and effect until declared invalid by a competent tribunal."

Appeal to Supreme Court.

An appeal has been ordered by the Governor to the Supreme Court of the United States from the judgment rendered by the United States Circuit Court, discharging Wood and Wilson, the Southern ticket agents, and meanwhile further steps are to be taken to arrest other violators of the State law.

The railroad company, in turn, is preparing for a fight to include in the injunction an application for broadening its scope. By this they hope to make it operative directly upon all prosecuting officers of the State of North Carolina, and, if possible upon the State courts themselves. This, if granted, would bar all complaints before magistrates or grand jurys of any violation of the Railroad Rate law.

The railroad company is really seeking to have any person who questions its legality summoned for contempt. The Southern Railway attorneys declare openly that Governor Glenn is guilty of contempt in seeking to enforce the law when a Federal judge has declared it unconstitutional.

Judge Pritchard, it is said, is almost determined to have Police Judge Reynolds brought before him in contempt for issuing warrants against the ticket agents of the company and for trying them in his court.

Attempt to Compromise.

In Washington, it is said that the administration does not relish the feud between the State officials of North Carolina and the Federal courts over the enforcement of the State Railway Rate Bill.

Assistant Attorney General Sanford, it is said, was sent to North Carolina really to effect a compromise. He was to use his influence with the Southern railway people to have them fight their case out in the State court and to withdraw their application of a writ of habeas corpus from Federal court. It then would have been proper for an appeal to the Supreme Court of the United States if the action of the highest State court had been contrary to what they desired.

Governor Ignores The Federal Law

Declaring his determination to ignore Federal Judge Pritchard's ruling that the State rate law is unconstitutional, Governor R. B. Glenn of North Carolina really insists that the State law is supreme over the Federal in the way he sums up:

"The contention is over the constitutionality of our rate law. The railroads contend it is unconstitutional in that it confiscates their property, and seek to enforce this through the Federal Court. The Federal Court seeks to enjoin our State courts from any jurisdiction, even to indictments, and, by restraining orders in civil suits and habeas corpus proceedings in criminal indictments, attempts to ignore State courts.

"We think the orderly way, our court having jurisdiction, is, in case railroads are aggrieved, for them to appeal through the State courts to the Supreme Court of the United States."

GIVE ALL TO EASE LAST DAYS OF DYING GIRL

Franklin House Young Women Make Many Sacrifices for Comrade.

By Rev. E. A. George.

"Who will take care of me?" said Filene Hawley, aged twenty, when she was told she had consumption and must not work.

She had been living at the Franklin Square House and was employed as a bookkeeper in this city.

She did not ask that question long. Everyone liked Filene and wanted to help her. Her room-mate, Miss Marjory B. Bluitie, a nurse, made up her mind to give one half of her weekly wages toward making this unfortunate girl comfortable.

She gave it willingly. Her kindness touched others. She then gave all her wages for several weeks and secured comfortable quarters for Filene in the country.

There she is to-day in the quiet of a private home, as the State Sanatorium could not accept her on account of her serious condition.

Other hard-working girls, the Misses Prescott, who are employed in a dental office, and lodge at the Young Women's Christian Association, responded and have relinquished their salaries for weeks in order that this girl may continue to enjoy the country air.

These young women have done extra work that they might provide more for this unfortunate girl.

Tired and weary with their usual duties, they took upon themselves the saving of money by doing their own laundry, and so for weeks they have saved money in this way and given it for dainties that this girl might have every comfort within their power.

These young women have now received word that their patient must be removed to another place, and they are making preparations to receive her at the Cullis Home, Dorchester.

Poor Filene will be well taken care of, no matter what happens.

These kind young women, who have so willingly given more than they can really afford for the comfort of the young woman, would be glad to welcome any assistance.

Filene Hawley lost her father last Christmas and is without any relatives. She is considered a worthy girl and has a host of friends at the Franklin Square House, who are willing to do anything in their power to make her last days happy.

GEORGIA BOY HERO FIGHTS FOR HIS LIFE

Young Providence Victim Had Shipped Under an Assumed Name.

Under age, yet determined to enlist in the service of his country and even giving a fictitious name in order to do so, Lawrence Arthur Silva of No. 200 Ann street, Providence, R. I., to-day lies in the Naval Hospital in Chelsea suffering from terrible burns received in the after turret room of the United States battleship Georgia in the fatal explosion of last week.

Young Silva is far under age and his father, Manuel George Silva, who for twenty-six years has driven a wagon for the Earle & Prew Express Company in Providence, and who had two sons in the navy, objected to his youngest boy's going into the service.

Determined to Be a Sailor.

But Lawrence was determined to be a sailor and he slipped away to New York where he enlisted as John A. Bush of that city. After serving one year on a training ship, young Silva, or Bush, as he is known in the navy, was placed on the Georgia as gun pointer.

He gained a god record in the service. At the time of the accident he was standing by his gun and received terrible burns about his head, arms, shoulders and hands. To-day, along with Seamen Foue, Messe and Thomas, his condition is regarded as very serious. It is thought by the surgeons, however, that Silva, in spite of his critical condition has a chance owing to his splendid will power and strong physique.

After the accident the naval authorities tried to locate the family of young "Bush" as they knew him, in New York. This, of course, was in vain. Some of the members of the Silva family knew that Lawrence had enlisted under the name of Bush, and they told the parents.

Mrs. Silva hastened to the hospital in Chelsea, where she saw her youngest boy who had all but given his life to his country, lying in a cot swathed in bandages.

Affecting Interview.

An affecting interview followed, yet the heroic boy did not seem to regret that he had become a sailor even at the fearful cost he was paying.

Last Saturday Mr. Silva saw his boy in the hospital and promised that he would seek a leave of absence for his son, James, who is but seventeen, now at the Newport training ship, to visit th young hero in the hospital.

PLAN CONCERT FOR CHARITY

Members of the Central Council of the United Irish County Clubs are working assiduously to make the entertainment to be given under their auspices before inmates of the institution at Long Island, on Monday, July 31, a success.

The project was fostered by the president of the Boston Central Council, Martin J. O'Brien, who enlisted the support of the members of the subordinate branches in the undertaking.

Permission has been secured from Superintendent English and other officials in charge of the institution, all of whom have given their most hearty indorsement to the project.

100 IMPERILLED IN BROADWAY FIRE

NEW YORK, July 24.—A three-alarm fire in Broadway between White and Franklin streets to-day imperilled the lives of about 100 men and women in the six-story building at No. 369 Broadway. For an hour a crowd of thousands congested the big thoroughfare, tying up traffic, while fifteen fire engines poured streams of water into the building.

MILL OWNERS ASK WEAVERS FOR MEETING

Suggest Conference As Means of Avoiding the Threatened Strike.

SEND LETTER TO UNION.

FALL RIVER, July 24.—That the Manufacturers' Association earnestly desires to avoid the strike threatened by the Weavers' Union is shown by a letter just sent to Secretary Whitehead of the union by President Hills of the Manufacturers' Association, in which a conference is suggested between representatives of the Textile Council and of the Association regarding the differences over a standard length of weaving cut.

The letter enters into the question in much detail. It reads in part:

"The subject of discussion is important and involves careful consideration in order that rights of all parties—weavers, other operatives and manufacturers—should be protected.

"It is apparent that, if an arbitrary standard were fixed, the weaver on one set of looms might, by reason of certain advantages not foreseen when the standard was made, obtain a much larger weekly wage than his neighbor, and the contrary is equally true.

"A proposition of such moment cannot be definitely and wisely determined upon without further conference and consideration and certainly not within the time which remains prior to Monday, the 29th inst.

Should a Nation Know How to Shoot?

By All Means. Consider the Chinese and the Japanese

Copyright, 1907, by American-Journal-Examiner

A very prominent gentleman has advised all boys to learn to shoot, and this has caused some discussion. A reader requests our opinion as to the advisability of advocating the use of firearms in this Republic.

Here is our opinion:

Every man in a republic should know how to use firearms. Every citizen should know how to use a rifle, and should OWN a rifle.

Nations that have lost their liberties have been unarmed nations.

Nations that have gained liberty or resisted attack have known how to defend themselves as individuals as well as nationally.

When this country successfully fought the British, ALMOST EVERY MAN IN THE UNITED STATES OWNED A RIFLE AND KNEW HOW TO USE IT. It was simple to turn the sight of the rifle from the bear or Indian to the hired man with the red coat.

When the little Boer nation beat the British once and kept them at bay so long this last time, EVERY BOER OWNED HIS RIFLE AND WAS A GOOD MARKSMAN.

Too few men in this country to-day know how to shoot; too few boys are taught to shoot, too few of the citizens generally own a rifle with which they might in case of necessity unite with their fellows in defending themselves against anarchy from the top or the bottom of society.

A nation should be armed and remain armed, as long as brutality and fighting shall remain the court of last resort.

---

If you want to know the difference between the nations that are taught to fire, that are accustomed to arms, and the other kind, consider the Chinese and the Japanese.

In China, not one man in a thousand ever had a gun in his hand, or knew anything about the use of any weapon. They were beaten so easily by the little Japanese nation that it was comical.

In Japan, on the other hand, for centuries a great body of the people—the Samurai—have been taught to fight. They have been looked up to, imitated by the working class below them.

The flower of Japanese manhood has been trained in fighting, self-denial, military exercise, for centuries. And the result shows in the splendid fighting officers and men that Japan could produce at a moment's notice to thrash Russia.

As a sample of another peaceful, unarmed country, look at India, with three hundred millions of mild, sheep-like, dark-colored creatures, living under the rule of a handful of beef-eating, beer-drinking, fighting English thousands of miles away.

It is a BAD thing to fight. It is a brutal thing to WANT to fight.

But it is an extremely unfortunate thing not TO KNOW HOW TO FIGHT IN CASE YOU ARE ATTACKED.

Boys in this country should be taught to use firearms, and they should be taught at the same time that their use is excusable only in resisting attack. Men should own firearms. With all the citizens armed, there would be no danger of injustice triumphant.

For under our laws and our ideas the MAJORITY constitutes the right, and the majority would win, with all on equal footing.

It is bad to have in a nation only a small collection of hired fighting individuals, with the masses ignorant of arms. For these are apt to be at the mercy of selfish interests, not always interested in the welfare of the majority.

Union Labor Ladies—Don't Be Silly

Marry the Man YOU LIKE. Change Him if You Can

The Woman's National Trade Union League is a noble organization. May it prosper and put tacks in the path of the selfish man who underpays women and overworks them; may it help to bring about real civilization, in which no woman will work with her hands, but only with her head and with her heart to make men better and to produce better children than the world has known.

It is distressing that the Woman's National Trade Union League should not be always wise. The young ladies have decided to establish a matrimonial endowment fund. The fund will pay a certain sum to each young woman when she marries. That is a good idea.

But the young women have a BAD idea, expressed thus: "There shall be no marriage of a union labor girl and a non-union man." That is not sound. It is silly.

Women marry, largely, to make men better. The best way to make a non-union man take the right view of labor is to have a union girl marry him. She can talk him into unionism very quickly.

The important thing in marriage is not color, height, religion, unionism, or anything else—IT IS AFFECTIONATE SYMPATHY.

Real affection between the man and the woman means good children, a good life, a greater mental strength in the next generation—and that is what the world wants.

We point out respectfully to the labor union ladies that the babies cannot possibly be born with the union label on their little backs. Every baby must start out for itself, and what the girls think about when they get married should be not the present, but the future; not only the man of to-day, but the child of twenty years hence.

Let the union woman marry the man she likes, and fix his ideas and beliefs afterward if they don't suit her.

THREE CHUMS— "Pa," "Son" and the Bull Pup

A white-and-liver-colored bull pup, tugging at his leash, led them into the elevated train. Then came the boy, about fifteen years old, holding the leash in one hand and a mackintosh in the other.

Last came the father, dressed for a day's outing, and carrying a telescopic valise, which bulged at the sides.

It was obvious that "Pa," "Son" and the bull pup were off for a day's outing.

They left the train at Rowe's Wharf. It needed no Sherlock Holmes to tell that they were off for a water trip. For mother had carefully made the lad take his mackintosh, in chance of a stiff wind or a wetting.

They were chums, one with another. The boy looked up frank-eyed and fearless at his father. The father talked confidentially with "Son." The bull pup vibrated impartially between them.

"Son" did not have to hang around street corners for a day's pleasure. He had "Pa" to go with. "Pa" didn't sneak away by himself for a fishing trip. He wanted the boy's company. And the bull pup had both for companions.

"Mother" was not there. Probably she didn't care for the roughing-it trip that the grown man, the healthy boy and the muscular bull pup would enjoy. "Mother" had stuffed the valise with something to eat and plenty of it.

And in this combination of the man, the boy and the dog was the one best answer to the whole question of juvenile depravity and how to prevent it—"Pa," "Son" and the Bull Pup, chums, the three of them.

Diary of a Candidate

By Wex Jones

MONDAY.—Had a lot of hay thrown in barn this morning, as I expect a Kansas delegation to-morrow. It musses up the barn, but then it should make good with the delegation. Trying to think up a new drink; butermilk sounds too mollycoddish—perhaps lemonade might do.

TUESDAY.—Great hit with the hay. Delegates evidently much pleased. Told them it was lucky they didn't come to-morrow, as then I will be thinning turnips.

WEDNESDAY.—This hay business is very fatiguing, hardly worth the votes it may get. Sent the children out to-day for a sail on the battleship Oklahoma. Must have the navy increased, as there are hardly enough battleships to go round. Besides, they might come in handy against Japan if my friends weren't using them. Saved a bullfrog from drowning this evening by catching it before it could get into the water.

THURSDAY.—Drank three glasses of ice cream soda this morning. It evidently made a hit, as I saw three girls and a possible voter drinking the same thing after I left. Have cut out the hay business, as it is too strenuous for the slight impression it makes.

FRIDAY.—Tried to show a delegation of nature writers how the birds at Oyster Bay know me. Greatly chagrined after declaring that a certain note was the song of the chewink to find that it was a tiddledywink. Fortunately none of the naturalists knew the difference. Mistook a catbird for a pusywillow, but again none of the visitors could tell the difference.

SATURDAY.—Ordered the battleship squadron to the Pacific. Too much fuss kicked up by them here. Would order the army to Guam, only I need some one to look after the social end of the White House affair. Several States show an inclination to buck against the Federal power, so I must put my foot down on them. States are all right in their way, but I am a Federal official, and the States are in the way. The country should be one large State and I should be its boss. Wish I could get away to shoot a few deer.

THE STENOGRAPHER

She Discourses on the Folly of the Bride Who Expects Her Husband to Do the Cooking

By Dorothy Dix

"BRIDES are doing mighty queer things in these days," remarked the Stenographer musingly.

"Anybody that's crazy enough to get married when they might enjoy the peace of single blessedness is liable to do anything," commented the Bookkeeper.

"There was that girl who married young Mr. Schwab and passed up the two million dollars that brother Charlie offered to give her as a wedding gift in favor of the simple life," went on the Stenographer.

"Huh, the more fool she," exclaimed the Bookkeeper; "the plunks would have come in mighty handy when the gilding begins to rub off the honeymoon. People ought to always have something to fall back on when they get tired of clasping fins and asking each other ''Oos ducky is 'oo?' I don't believe in marrying for money, but I've got a hunch that I'll never fall in love with anybody that hasn't got a roll."

"And now," continued the Stenographer, pursuing her theme of the peculiarities of brides, "here's an account in the paper of another girl who refused to marry a man until he proved to her that he was a good free hand cook. The paper says that before the coy maiden consented to be his he invited her to a dinner every dish of which he had prepared with his own hands."

Very Unromantic

"I SUPPOSE," suggested the Bookkeeper, "that instead of asking 'Will you swear by yonder moon, Algernon, always to be true to me?' she asked him if he'd swear always to do the cooking. Unromantic, but sensible."

"Fool!" said the Stenographer with withering emphasis. "I have no patience with those women who want to put aprons on men. They are killing the goose that lays the golden egg, and every time I hear of a man being taught how to cook or sew I simply have heart failure. How any woman in her senses can encourage any such innovation into our rights and privileges I don't know. She ought to be locked up in an asylum for the feeble-minded, where she can't do any harm."

"How's that?" inquired the Bookkeeper.

"Why," explained the Stenographer, "when you take away a man's dependence on woman you remove the chief incentive to matrimony. What makes a man's thoughts first turn to love?"

"The Spring. Love. Congeniality. A beautiful face. A desire for companionship," replied the Bookkeeper succinctly.

From Experience

"BOSH," cried the Stenographer. "It's nothing of the sort. It's tough steak and mean bread and watery coffee. It's the perpetual smell of fried steak and onions that hangs about a boarding house. It's clothes lost in the laundry. It's buttons missing. It's the desolation of the chambermaid's touch on a room."

"Have felt it myself," admitted the Bookkeeper, "and debated whether I should endure the ills I had or fly to those that I knew not of."

"Of course," triumphed the Stenographer, "every man has, and at some such season of despair he goes out and hunts up a girl and pops the question to her; but would he do it if he was an expert tailor, an artistic chambermaid and a cooking school graduate? Nay, verily. He'd get him a sewing basket and a carpet sweeper and a gas stove, and get busy himself, instead of letting himself in for a wife's temper and bills.

"Not every man gets it, but practically every man marries for a home, and that's why I can't abide these dog in the manger women that queer the matrimonial game for the balance of us by promoting domesticity in men. Goodness knows it's hard enough to catch a husband nowadays, anyway, when we've got the chrome of home sweet home to offer, but what it will be to tote a man up to the altar when he knows he's got to do the cooking as well as buy the groceries I tremble to think. It'll be something fierce.

"Besides, I don't want to have to stand for the criticism of any man whose pies can make mine look like a skinned huckleberry. The only way that woman has maintained a supremacy over man this long is by his knowing less about cooking than she did."

"If I had been the man who had to file exhibit A of his cooking to a girl to get her to marry him, I would have made tracks while the walking was good," said the Bookkeeper, "because I'd a had a line that after marriage it would have been the Mary Jane act for mine.

"Amen," replied the Stenographer.

Quarrels would not last long if the fault was only on one side.
